Byrnes Asks Grain, Cotton Barter for War Supplies

State Department Would Work Out Treaties on Trade For Rubber, Tin

By Robert C. Albright.

Exchange of American surplus wheat and cotton for rubber and tin stocks held by Great Britain, Holland and Belgium was proposed in the Senate yesterday with the apparent full force of Administration backing.

Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, announced negotiations for the "trade" will be opened by the State Department in the next few days.

Breaking sharply away from the reciprocal trade formula of Secretary of State Hull, the plan none the less was said to have his support.

State Department Approves

Commenting on the proposal, the State Department last night said the proposed interchanges "ought to be mutually beneficial" if it is possible to arrange them.

The department said it understood the project to mean it would undertake to find out "whether certain other governments would be willing to enter into an exchange of certain raw materials reciprocally desired for emergency stock purposes and for such purposes only."

"Such arrangements would fall completely outside of the sphere of ordinary commercial interchange," it was added, "and would not affect the sphere of operations of the trade agreements program or any of our other general policies."

State Department officials said they will open discussions as soon as convenient "if the President so desires."

Admits It Is "Barter"

Byrnes said his announcement followed conferences in the last ten days with both Hull and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace. He said double purpose of the plan is to cut down the Government loan cotton and wheat surplus in return for strategic war materials.

The three nations named would receive cotton and wheat of equal strategic importance to them in preparation for possible hostilities.

Asked if he was not proposing in effect a "barter" system, similar to the German trade method which has been so vigorously denounced by Hull in the past, Byrnes said he would not deny it was "barter" but said it would be limited in scope to the type of materials mentioned.

"Name Means Nothing"

"Call it anything you please," said Byrnes. "My answer is, if this is barter, I like it. The name means nothing."

He said he regarded it as a necessary defense step, bulwarking this Nation's economy against serious shortages of rubber and tin, which would inevitably follow any general European war.

There were some indications the three nations named already may have been informally approached, though the Senate spokesman for the move said only that State Department representatives will open overtures "within the next few days."

Senate Would Have Say

If agreements are consummated, they would take the form of treaties which, unlike reciprocal trade agreements, would require ratification by the Senate.

If treaties are negotiated, Byrnes said they would stipulate that the cotton and wheat be held by the purchasing governments for five years, unless prior to expiration of that period market prices should

Stocks Rebound From Swift Fall In War Scare

New York, April 10 (AP).—Wall Street stock tickers, overworked last week by waves of selling as fear of war increased in money centers, clicked off higher share prices today in a moderate rebound from the market's swift fall.

Many stocks recovered $1 to $3 of the previous wide losses. European markets remained closed for the Easter holidays and the New York Stock Exchange had the world's financial spotlight for action based on international political developments.

President Pauses to Say 'I Wish I Could Be With You;' One Small Girl In Pink Actually Detected Rolling an Egg

The most famous back yard in America took a terrific beating yesterday.

Something like a State fair got mixed up with what resembled Sherman's march to the sea and several symptoms of a medium-size tornado. It happened on the White House lawn and the whole clambake was called Easter Monday egg-rolling.

Things started at 9 a. m. with a stampede that made the Oklahoma land rush and other celebrated mass movements of the past look like leisurely promenades. Eight hours later the rear guard of 52,259 egg lovers retreated across the lawn, leaving behind them what can be conservatively described as a shambles.

A small girl in pink, according to unconfirmed reports, actually was observed rolling an egg.

This activity, unheard of for years, was quickly quashed by the horde of adults who dominated the scene.

Other eggs were thrown, eaten, stepped and sat on. The eggy film which covered the lawn by mid-afternoon was spread by the feet of departing guests along sidewalks past the Treasury and State Department Buildings. Authentic egg particles were reported as far from the White House as Thirteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

Added ingredients of the colorful layer left on the 10-acre lawn included newspapers, oiled paper, apple cores, broken balloons and excelsior.

White House groundkeepers looked away when asked to comment on Mrs. Roosevelt's statement in a radio broadcast to the children of America: "I wish all of you could be here."

The lost-and-found children department did a brisk business behind a hedge on the White House grounds. A total of 78 family re-

Harshly Worded 'Duns' Target of Court Decision

Collection agencies had best be careful about the icy-worded letters some of them mail out, because the Court of Appeals, Justice Vinson dissenting, said yesterday that if they worry a man too much he can sue for damages.

This victory for the common man was proclaimed by Justice Edgerton in an opinion which lawyers hailed as developing a new and curious principle of law.

The court ordered the District Court to hear a damage suit brought by Attorney Richard A. Harman for Albert R. Clark, who complained that the Associated Retail Credit Men of Washington, D. C., a corporation, made his life miserable with threatening letters in connection with an alleged debt of $61.80.

Gas Mask Stolen From U.S. Building

Police are searching for the pessimist who recently stole a gas mask from the South Agriculture Building. The theft was discovered yesterday. Raymond H. Walshe, special investigator for the Interior Department, was assigned to the case. The mask was valued at $40.

Roosevelt To Withdraw Amlie's Name

Former Representative Nominated to ICC Made Request

President Roosevelt will withdraw the appointment of former Representative Thomas R. Amlie, Wisconsin Progressive, as a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, it was disclosed yesterday.

The withdrawal request probably will be forwarded to the Senate today. Amlie yesterday wrote the President asking that his name be withdrawn. Expectation is that his letter, and the President's reply, will be made public.

Will Break Deadlock

Withdrawal of the highly controversial appointment will break the deadlock which has delayed Senate action on two other ICC nominations, Senators believed.

J. Haden Alldredge, of Montgomery, Ala., moving spirit in the South's battle for removal of freight-rate differentials, was appointed to the commission some weeks ago, and William E. Lee, of Idaho, was reappointed.

The nominations, as well as Amlie's, have been held up in a sub-committee of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee headed by Senator Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado. The feeling in the Senate was that no action should be taken on any of the nominations until an arrangement had been made to dispose of all.

Linked With Rail Aid

Congressional action at this session on railroad-aid legislation is linked with the question of the ICC appointments. By clearing the latter out of the way, the White House will improve to some extent prospects—as yet remote—for a

Hutchins Won't Leave University For SEC Post

Chicago, April 10 (AP).—President Robert Maynard Hutchins of the University of Chicago, whose name has been mentioned recently in speculation over the selection of a new chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, said today he has "no intentions of leaving" the university.

Hutchins declined to elaborate on the statement, saying any comment on reports that he had been offered a Government post must come from Federal officials. William O. Douglas, who has been head of the SEC, was appointed to the U. S. Supreme Court.

Son Doubts President's Aid for South

Roosevelt's Advice Termed 'Vague;' Elliott Criticizes Spending, Taxes

By the United Press.

Fort Worth, Tex., April 10.—Elliott Roosevelt, second son of the President, tonight said the South could never "get out of hock" under the Administration's "vague" encouragement. He said the New Deal pump-priming "and tax structure erected to foot the bill are defeating their purpose of business recovery."

Young Roosevelt, in a regular radio commentary, called his father's assertion that the South could better its position by investing its own capital in its own establishments "vague and distant when one begins to analyze the ills to overcome."

"Utopian Ideal"

"Without specific aid and encouragement from the Administration," he said, "the South can not be expected to take its place in the economic sun.

"It is the opinion of many, I regret to say, that the New Deal pump priming methods and the tax structure erected to foot the bill are defeating their purpose of business recovery."

"The New Deal and its leader, the President," he declared, "had an Utopian ideal in mind in its recovery program. That ideal was the raising of standards of living of persons in all walks of life.

"The primary aim was business recovery, which would make that goal possible. The pump-priming theory was an abortive means to an end—a hit-or-miss program. . . . The New Deal planners seem to have overlooked the fundamental fact that without healthy competition and adequate returns, there can be no healthy trade."

Blames Frozen Capital

He listed four "chief obstacles" to the South's economic rejuvenation: frozen capital; inequitable freight rates; lack of a balanced agricultural program, with resultant denuded soil, and lack of a long-range educational program "to teach the masses the art of better living."

In referring to his father's formula for getting the South "out of hock to the North," Roosevelt said that "the problem of frozen capital" was hindering the South from taking this bit of advice. Frozen capital, he said, "is perhaps more pressing on the South than on any other section, since as a comparatively undeveloped country the South must look to new investments of new capital if it is to become industrialized."

Inequitable freight rates, he said, "make it impossible for industry and potential industry of this section to get its products to market and compete with products from the more favored areas."

The abolition of "discriminatory rate differentials," he asserted, is the battle "of greatest importance to the South at this time."

Italy Threatens Intervention in Americas if U.S. 'Meddles' More

By James M. Minifie.
Special Cable to The Post.

Rome, April 10.—Threats of totalitarian intervention in the affairs of the American continent unless the United States changes its attitude, characterized Italian reaction today to Secretary of State Hull's condemnation of the invasion of Albania.

After pinning many of Europe's political and economic woes on American "interference" and "dense ignorance," Virginio Gayda, customary mouthpiece of the foreign ministry, warned today:

"It is time this ended. Let the United States stay in America. Let them look after their own many and complex problems. If they reject this time the advice, don't let them complain if European states chosen for their targets decide in self-defense to busy themselves in the same spirit with North American matters."

Spanish Bases Available

(German and Italian authoritative sources generally have ridiculed American concern over totalitarian activities, asserting that concern was based on a false fear of Fascist-Nazi interference in affairs in the Western Hemisphere.—Editor's note.)

With the adherence of Spain to the anti-Comintern bloc, this is no longer an empty threat, for Spanish cultural and political influence carries weight in Latin America.

When Gayda last February declared if America's frontier was in France, Italy's and Germany's was on the Panama Canal, it was generally discounted as hyperbole, despite the construction last year of at least 14 Italian submarines capable of cruising in American waters. But the possibility that Spain's Canary Islands, 1,500 miles further west, might be used as naval and air bases, puts another complexion on the matter.

New Reserves Called

On the military side, it is learned, that on Easter Sunday the 1912 class was called to the colors. This is a large class estimated to contain between 250,000 and 300,000 men and it is the first full class that has been called recently of men who could be described as first-line material.

In addition to this, it was learned that Easter leave for workers in the northern factories were canceled in order not to interrupt production.

Gayda devotes four columns to his consideration of America. He starts off by saying that the United States should mind their own business; the history of the United States (in a bird's-eye view Gayda counts 150 armed actions and eight invasions of Mexico in the last 100 years) gives them no "moral or political right to raise their voice against

D.C. Beauty Shop Proprietress Hangs Herself in Jail Cell

Mrs. Stella Quarles, 33, Forms a Noose From Her Shirt

Knotting the sleeves of her shirt for a noose, an attractive 33-year-old beauty shop proprietress hanged herself from the bars of a Fifth Precinct cell shortly after she had been committed there yesterday.

The body of Mrs. Stella Quarles, 2308 Eighteenth street northwest, who was being held on a charge of drunkenness, was discovered by Lieut. Emil Desch as he made a check of the cell block. Mrs. Quarles was clad in a riding habit.

Mrs. Quarles, who operated a beauty shop at 3444 Fourteenth street northwest, was arrested at the home of her husband, Rudy Quarles, taxi driver, 324 Second street southeast, from whom she was separated.

According to her sisters, Mrs. Lillian Mites, with whom she lived, Mrs. Quarles left their apartment around noon to go horseback riding after she had prepared lunch for her son, Charles, 15.

Neither Mrs. Mites, nor Mrs. Irene Norris, a neighbor who managed Mrs. Quarles' beauty shop, could account for the suicide. They said she had been unusually cheerful Sunday and yesterday morning. Charles,

Tired of Nazis, Bergdoll to Risk U. S. Pen

Draft-Dodger's Wife Arrives in New York, Says He'll Sail Soon

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 10.—After 19 years of exile in Germany, Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, the World War draft dodger, is coming home because he wants to live here and see his children become good Americans.

His pretty German wife, Berta, who arrived today on the Hamburg American liner St. Louis with four of their five children, said Bergdoll was homesick and eager to restore himself to his former status by serving the five-year sentence imposed on him by an Army court martial for evading military service.

Expected to Sail Soon

Bergdoll will sail for the United States at the earliest opportunity, she said.

Her husband's lawyer, Harry Weinberger, who defended him at the court martial early in 1920, contends Bergdoll is an American citizen, that citizenship is an inalienable right which cannot be lost save through renunciation by the individual.

"You can lose your citizenship rights, but not your citizenship," he said. "The Government holds a different view, and that is one of the points we shall have to settle. I've been working on this case for nearly a year now and as soon as a few details are cleaned up we'll get Bergdoll back. He's tired of Germany anyhow."

Bergdoll, son of a wealthy Philadelphia brewer, lived an exciting youth as an automobile racer and

14-Hour 'Strike' To Back Purge of Argentine Nazis

Buenos Aires, April 10 (AP).—The executive committee of the General Labor Confederation, representing every unionized worker in Argentina, today ordered a 14-hour "stoppage" of work next Saturday to demonstrate labor's solidarity with the government "against infiltration of Nazi doctrines."

Labor leaders said 500,000 workers were expected to participate in the demonstration from 6 a. m. to 8 p. m. Saturday.

The action is to show President Roberto M. Ortiz that labor supports his intention to investigate "every nook and cranny" of alleged Nazi activities.

Netherlands Mans Borders; French Weigh Show of Power

London to Offer Alliances to Athens, Ankara, Budapest; Paris Believed Ready to Act, if Dictators Attack; 'Albania Enough,' Duce Is Quoted

The European Situation

LONDON—Britain followed a cabinet decision to guarantee the independence of Greece, Rumania and Turkey by ordering its fleet to reinforce strategic points in the Mediterranean, despite Mussolini's reported assurance he would confine his military operations to Albania. Rumania was reported to have concluded a defensive alliance with England.

PARIS—France backed Britain and was believed ready to act immediately should Italy or Germany move in the Balkans. Premier Daladier called his cabinet to meet today.

ROME—A threat to interfere on the American continent unless the United States "minded her own business' was voiced by Virginio Gayda, Fascist press spokesman.

AMSTERDAM—The Netherlands brought border battalions to full strength because of the "war danger."

ATHENS—Premier Metaxas reassured Greece that Greek independence would be defended.

TIRANA—Italian commanders threatened "inexorable martial law" against any Albanians challenging their conquerors.

Netherlands Prepared

By the Associated Press.

Amsterdam, April 10.—The Netherlands tonight called up border troops for military duty because of "war danger" seen in the international situation.

A royal decree brought the border battalions up to full strength.

An official statement said:

"By royal decree it is decided that the actual international situation is continuing war danger, therefore border battalions on Monday were called under arms.

"This must not be considered as a direct result of events of the last days, but that the general European situation makes a better border defense desirable for maintaining the policy of independence . . ."

Naval Display Studied

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 10.—France backed Great Britain today in a hurried effort to rally eastern European nations into an anti-aggression front and was believed ready to act immediately should Italy or Germany take a further military step in the Balkans.

Premier Daladier summoned his ministers to a cabinet meeting tomorrow, advancing the session a day because of Premier Mussolini's conquest of strategic Albania.

France was reported considering a joint naval and military "power display" along with Britain to try to impress Italy and Germany with the gravity with which they view the Italian annexation of the Balkan bridgehead country.

French Worries

Italy's assurances that no pressure was contemplated on Greece or Greece's key island of Corfu, off southern Albania guarding the entrance to the Adriatic Sea, were weighed against these facts:

Italy had told Britain in advance of the Albanian invasion that Italian troop concentrations at Brindisi, Italian port across the Adriatic from Albania, were not directed against Albania.

Reinforcement of Italian garrisons in Libya, North African colony next to French Tunisia, which have long caused concern in Paris.

Public Remains Calm

The French public remained calm. The nation's defense chiefs maintained a close contact with the British. French diplomats were busy in Yugoslavia, Greece, Turkey and Rumania—countries whose co-operation is vital if the French-British resistance plan is to succeed.

The French were encouraged by at least one Albanian repercussion—the effect caused in Syria and the near east. Moslems there condemned Premier Mussolini, who has long professed to be "the protector of Islam."

London, April 10.—Great Britain tonight followed a cabinet decision to guarantee the independence of Greece, Turkey and Rumania with swift orders to its powerful fleet to reinforce strategic points in the eastern Mediterranean against possible attack by Italy.

Simultaneously, the British government warned Italy that any attack against Greece or occupation of any part of Greece would be considered as an "unfriendly act" and as a direct attack on British interests, it was learned.

Premier Mussolini, it was reported in British diplomatic circles, has conveyed a personal message to Prime Minister Chamberlain assuring him Italy's conquest of Albania was "absolutely necessary," and Italian military action in the future will be confined strictly to Albania.

Parliament Recalled

Despite this, British and French naval forces were placed on a basis of virtual semimobilization in the entire Mediterranean and at Germany's naval doorstep, the North Sea, as the threat of imminent war continued to hang over Europe.

Chamberlain called a Parliament meeting on Thursday, interrupting the members' Easter vacation scheduled to have ended April 18. The recall did not specify the length of the forthcoming emergency session, but it was felt likely the meeting would carry over until Friday in view of the possibility of a lengthy debate on important international questions.

Both houses were last recalled during the Czech-German crisis last September.

Paris Cabinet Meets Today

The British cabinet's decision will be augmented tomorrow when the French cabinet meets in Paris to pledge France's support to Greece, Rumania and Turkey in the event of an offensive by German, Italian or Bulgarian armed forces.

Thus, the Anglo-French Entente, after extending a similar "protective guarantee" to Poland, will spread a fan of arms against Nazi or Fascist aggression into the farthest corners of southeastern Europe.

Formal assurances of naval and other assistance already have been extended to Greece by the British government, and such rapid prog-

LAURELS FOR MR. HUGHES

Today a great Chief Justice is 77 . . . The Capital esteems him as highly and fondly as it did the great Justice Holmes . . . Twice he has tossed away the Presidency—but there have been 32 Presidents and only 11 Chief Justices . . . Teddy Roosevelt was ready to hand it to N. Y.'s Gov. Hughes in 1908—he was a mature Tom Dewey of his day — but he didn't lift a finger. And in 1916 he innocently shook the wrong hands in California, lost California by 3,800 votes, lost the Presidency by California's 13 delegates.

The Chief Justice . . . 77 today

But the Republic is grateful; he'd never have lived to 77 . . . He arises at 6:30, strolls at 8 a. m. Chats amiably with neighbors' chauffeurs —like Mrs. Ed Meredith's courtly Baker . . . He's had impulses (I'm told) to remove that once reddish beard, but couldn't tamper with a national institution . . . But it's shorter than it was.

* * * *

He read at 3, completed high school at 11, college at 19, after three years off . . . He advises ambitious young lawyers not to work too hard, confides that he spent much of his time at college playing cards . . . His mind is photographic; he can absorb a longish book in an hour . . . After he dictates a speech he can deliver it from memory without notes.

"—some wags accosted him"

Shy behind his beard, he suffered when two wags once accosted him on Fifth avenue when he was Secretary of State, yammering his title . . . He escaped in a cab . . . His fan mail is next to FDR's . . . Though liberal Senators Norris, Borah and young LaFollette (not to mention Carter Glass!) mistakenly opposed his appointment, as a reactionary, he is actually on the liberal side of center, politically . . . Not one of his court votes is undebatably reactionary. Most are obviously liberal.

* * * *

He can tell stories in Irish, Scotch, German and Jewish dialects . . . In 1916 he favored a firm attitude toward Germany (as FDR does today); it was his peace-at-any-price, too-proud-to-fight opponents (led by Woodrow Wilson) who were sucked into war . . . Like Justice McReynolds, whom Teddy appointed as a liberal (!), Hughes hasn't turned out as Hoover, who appointed him, expected.

* * * *

His lunch is always the same: Two poached eggs, two slices of toast . . . The Hughes' dine out only on Saturdays; they know by Xmas where they'll be dining in May . . . But as Secretary of State he entertained and dined out six evenings a week, the life of the party . . . Yet he broke a Chief Justice precedent by attending the Gridiron dinner.

* * * *

Six nights a week he's in bed by 10 . . . He has 23 college degrees . . . To tourists he seems the incarnation of Jove or Jehovah . . . But he's more skeptical than he looks . . . Once a walking companion remarked, "Those sheep are shorn." "On this side, at least," replied the judicial Mr. Hughes . . . Once someone asked him if he understood French. "No," he said, "but I've taught it."

"—on an elephant and stilts"

The Chief Justice likes the overwhelming new $10,000,000 court building more than some of his colleagues . . . One of them observed that the Chief Justice should go up those marble steps on an elephant surrounded by the Associate Justices on stilts . . . His salary is $20,500 a year, and in 1937 he gave $3,350 to the Community Chest.

* * * *

He was a preacher's son, married his boss' daughter, and got his public start investigating insurance and gas rates . . . In court he cuts off a lawyer in mid-sentence if he exceeds his allotted minutes for argument . . . But he is gracious and kindly, especially to young lawyers . . .

* * * *

Crusader, Governor, Associate Justice, Presidential nominee, Secretary of State, Chief Justice, always a great liberal American, Chief Justice Hughes has deserved well of the Republic, a bulwark of the Constitution and the Court . . . If we Americans were as emotional as other people, he would be deluged with congratulatory messages today, and there would be a crowd in front of his house at 2223 R street this evening . . . But he probably would prefer to be left in peace on his birthday.

CIO Says Green Conspired With U. S. Chamber

Charge Blocks Peace On Eve of Hearings on Wagner Act Revision

Labor peace negotiations undertaken at the request of President Roosevelt, came to a standstill yesterday as the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations prepared for a finish fight over proposed changes in the Wagner labor act.

The CIO charged William Green, AFL president, with conspiring with the United States Chamber of Commerce and the National Association of Manufacturers to destroy the act.

This accusation, in a printed circular, was sent to all members of Congress on the eve of hearings, beginning today, by the Senate Education and Labor Committee. Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York, sponsor of the present labor relations law, will be first witness.

No Progress on Peace

The peace talks, indefinitely postponed in New York last Wednesday, probably will not be resumed, it was reliably reported, until the whole matter of Wagner act amendment has been settled.

The conferees, it was learned, have made no progress whatever toward any kind of mutually acceptable settlement.

"Untrue and without foundation" was Green's retort when informed of the C. I. O. accusation.

Senator Ellender (Democrat), Louisiana, a member of the Education and Labor Committee, introduced a new series of amendments which he said were designed "to protect bonafide independent unions from slaughter at the hands of the National Labor Relations Board."

Workers Urged to Write

Workers, who also will receive the C. I. O. circular, were urged to write Senators and Representatives.

"Alike as three peas in a pod" is the caption of the circular, which says:

"The campaign to amend the Wagner labor act reveals a strange line-up between antiunion manufacturers and certain leaders of the A. F. of L.

"If these amendments are passed they will disturb existing collective bargaining relations in many industries, create disorder and confusion in the whole matter of labor relations and promote industrial strife in place of industrial peace which has progressively followed upon acceptance of the Wagner act by employers."

John L. Lewis' organization charged that only a minority of employers who had defied the law were in favor of the program of changes advocated by Green and the employer organizations. A proposal by Green which would give employers the right to demand labor board elections, the C. I. O. said, was not indorsed by the Houston convention of the A. F. L.

5-Day Week Voted For D. C. Firemen In 4 Minutes

The House yesterday passed in four minutes a bill to give local firemen a 5-day, 60-hour week a short while after the House District Committee, which reported it, complained of the speed with which the District supply bill was rushed through the House.

The measure will cost the District government an estimated $500,000 a year in additional operating costs.

Members of the committee protested they had not had time to study the District appropriations bill.

Representative Randolph, chairman of the District Committee, stated that this year's experience was not unusual as all District appropriations measures were similarly handled.

House Passes Bill to Raise U. S. Contributions For Social Security to $80,000,000

By the Associated Press.

Legislation authorizing an increase from $49,000,000 to $80,000,000 in annual Federal contributions to help States administer their unemployment compensation laws was passed yesterday by the House and sent to the Senate.

COOPER

Representative Cooper (Democrat), of Tennessee, member of the Ways and Means Committee, which sponsored the increase, told the House that with all but two States actually paying benefits, considerably more money was needed than the $49,000,000 originally provided for in the Social Security Act.

Postoffice officials investigated yesterday theft of mail from the offices of at least three members of the House of Representatives. The robbery was discovered when mail addressed to Representatives Hull (Progressive), Wisconsin; O'Day (Democrat), New York, and Schafer (Republican), Wisconsin was found in a wash room of the old House office building.

Congress sent to President Roosevelt the Administration-advocated bill calling for reciprocal taxation on the incomes of 3,800,000 Federal, State and local government employes. Final action came when the House unanimously adopted a conference report, previously approved by the Senate.

The Treasury expects to receive $16,000,000 annually in additional revenue from 2,600,000 State and other local government employes. How much the 30-odd States which have income tax laws will collect from 1,200,000 Federal employes has yet to be ascertained.

The Rules Committee cleared the way for House consideration today of legislation raising from $3,000,000,000 to $4,000,000,000 the amount of insured mortgages the Federal Housing Administration may have outstanding.

Senate Slated To Pass Relief Bill Today

Vote Also Due On Pepper Proposal For $150,000,000

After postponing action yesterday because of the death of Senator Lewis, the Senate is expected to approve late today the $100,000,000 emergency relief bill passed by the House.

Final disposition of the measure will follow a vote on the Pepper amendment to raise the relief grant to $150,000,000, as requested by the President. A vote also will be taken on the Vandenberg resolution, which would permit WPA to function at full strength until June, when all its funds on hand would be exhausted.

Meanwhile, the House committee investigating WPA will hear its first witness today in the person of Col. F. C. Harrington, WPA administrator, who already has appeared several times before the same group when it was sitting as the Appropriations sub-committee handling relief.

Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, chief of the liberal bloc that has been fighting for several days for a $150,000,000 WPA appropriation, declared yesterday that Senators Pittman, Schwellenbach, Neely, Bilbo, Murray and others wished to speak on behalf of the increased grant today. He indicated, however, that his group would not attempt to defer the vote another day.

Federal Grants Undermine States' Rights, Gerry Says

By the Associated Press.

Senator Gerry (Democrat), Rhode Island, said last night that Federal grants-in-aid to the States are "gifts or bribes by which the Government induces the States to do what they otherwise could not or would not do."

Criticizing particularly the pending national health and education bills, Gerry, in an address over N. B. C., said:

"If the trend of increased Federal grants continues, the States as we know them will be unable to exist, or they will exist as bankrupt and powerless pawns of the Federal Government."

1,000 Leave WPA Here for Private Jobs

Can Cut Rolls by Not Replacing Those Who Go, Cass Says

More than 1,000 workers on local Works Progress Administration projects have left to accept private employment in the last month and a half, Otto J. Cass, assistant administrator in charge of the District WPA, declared yesterday.

Cass said he did not expect any substantial reduction in local rolls in case Congress cuts $50,000,000 off the $150,000,000 deficiency appropriation requested by President Roosevelt.

No Reduction Hinted

"We should be able to effect any necessary reduction this spring in the local roll by simply not replacing persons who leave," Cass pointed out.

"I have received no intimation, however, that there will be a reduction. If there is any cut, I do not expect it to be very large. We have an uncommon situation here in the District. Our unemployment problem is relatively stable. Cuts are effected best in areas of substantial seasonal employment, where people laid off can be absorbed into private employment."

Has No Bricklayers

Cass thought local construction was responsible for a large part of the shift of relief workers to private jobs. There are very few skilled workers on the WPA here now, he declared. In fact, the local WPA has not had a bricklayer for some time.

There are now about 12,800 workers on the District WPA roll, of whom 10,800 are on District projects and the remainder on Federal projects.

Have Job Agreement

C. E. Lamson, director of the District Employment Center announced that the center had made 3,002 job placements during March, an increase of 1,220, or 69 per cent, over March last year.

Cass pointed out that the local WPA has worked out an arrangement with Lamson whereby it would be given first consideration in all calls for jobs.

A. F. of L. Upheld Against C. I. O. In Bargaining

Over protestations of the C. I. O., the National Labor Relations Board yesterday held that an American Federation of Labor craft union can operate in a company where the C. I. O. has attempted to establish a strong industrial union.

Certification as sole collective bargaining agency was awarded the A. F. of L. Pattern Makers Association by the board ruling on pattern makers in the William Powell Co., of Cincinnati, engineering appliance manufacturers.

The C. I. O. Steel Workers Organizing Committee opposed, asking that it be designated as sole bargaining agent on the ground the majority of the workers had indicated their desire to bargain on an industrial rather than craft basis by joining the S. W. O. C.

The board found that before the S. W. O. C. began its drive in the plant in 1937, the A. F. of L. group had bargained, but had not requested sole agency recognition until the entrance of the S. W. O. C. organizers.

Morgenthau's Corporate Tax Plan Ready

Expects to Present It When House Unit Ends Security Act Study

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau declared yesterday he would present to the House Ways and Means Committee proposals for revision of the corporation tax as soon as the committee invites him to appear.

He expects to testify soon after the committee disposes of amendments to the social security act.

Sees Magill and Shoup

Morgenthau discussed tax revision yesterday with two Columbia University professors, Roswell Magill, former Undersecretary of the Treasury, and Dr. Carl Shoup, former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

He declined to comment on the proposal of the Federal Reserve Board for a study by Congress of the problem of monetary control, saying the Treasury "has all the powers it needs to do its job." The only necessary legislation, he declared, is the bill to extend monetary powers which lapse June 30.

Sidesteps Controversy

"I do not want to get into a controversy with the Reserve Board," he said, emphasizing the need for co-operation among agencies dealing with credit and banking questions.

Representative Oliver (Republican), of Maine, in a House speech yesterday called on Chairman Eccles of the Reserve Board to resign, criticizing Eccles for advocating continuance of the spending policy.

Harlan Firm Told To Reinstate 116

The National Labor Relations Board yesterday ordered the Good Coal Co., of Harlan County, Ky., to reinstate with back pay 116 employes who struck September 6, 1937, against working on Labor Day.

The company was instructed, also, to bargain collectively with the United Mine Workers of America, to disestablish as collective bargaining agent "the company-dominated" Wallins Creek Employes Association, and to stop discouraging membership in "any labor organization."

White House To Fete D.A.R. Sans First Lady

Mrs. Roosevelt to Fly To Seattle; Cabinet Ladies to Be Hostesses

The White House will hold its traditional reception for Daughters of the American Revolution Friday afternoon, April 21, but Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, who recently resigned from the organization, will not be there.

The First Lady, who quit the D. A. R. when the society refused to permit Marian Anderson, colored contralto, to sing in Constitution Hall, will be in Seattle visiting Mr. and Mrs. John Boettiger, her son-in-law and daughter, and her grandchildren.

Silent on Anderson

The reception at the Executive Mansion, however, will have Cabinet ladies as hostesses to the 4,000 delegates attending a convention here.

At her press conference yesterday, Mrs. Roosevelt refused to affirm or deny a report that Miss Anderson, who sang here Sunday evening before 75,000 persons from the Lincoln Memorial, would be invited to sing before the King and Queen of England, who will visit the White House this spring.

"Nothing has been settled," she said. "If we have an entertainment following the dinner we hope to show as many different types of talent as possible, but no definite plans have been made."

Might Present Medal

She also disclosed she was to speak at the closing convention session of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in Richmond, July 2, and in reply to a question said she would "be glad" to present the association's Springarn Medal to Miss Anderson then if asked to.

Events in Europe have stunned rather than embittered the American people, Mrs. Roosevelt replied when asked to describe the temper of the people she had seen in her recent five-week Nation-wide lecture tour. The American people, she said, "are not in a hating mood."

"The Nation as a whole finds it difficult to believe what is taking place abroad," she told the correspondents.

Western Isolationism Ebbs

The First Lady pointed out that she had detected a decrease in isolationist sentiment throughout the West, where there is now "a growing anxiety as to whether it is possible for us to live within ourselves."

Mrs. Roosevelt will leave for Seattle this week by plane to join her 9-year-old grandson, Buzzie Curtis Dall, son of Mrs. Boettiger, for his birthday, April 19. "Many months ago I promised Buzz I would be there for his brithday this year, and I don't want to disappoint him," she commented.

Moor to Take Cab Insurance Upset to Hill

Will Ask Congress to Clarify Power Voided by Court of Appeals

Immediate clarification by Congress of the District's taxicab insurance law will be sought by Superintendent of Insurance J. Balch Moor, he said last night following a Court of Appeals decision which yesterday voided 8 of the 19 regulations made by him under the law.

While recognizing "dangers to the public" in permitting the financial liability assumed by mutual companies to exceed their financial ability, the court decision held the superintendent lacks statutory authority to restrict the permission.

Moor was restrained, particularly, from endeavoring to cancel the license of the Hutchins Mutual Insurance Co. of the District to write taxicab insurance. Lloyd B. Harrison, of the corporation counsel's office, had argued that the company, with comparatively small capital, had written policies which covered $9,000,000 in possible liabilities.

The appellate tribunal indicated, however, that the basic insurance act must be followed and not the taxicab insurance act under which the rules were set up.

In its opinion, written by Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner, the court said:

"That there is immediate necessity for a revision by Congress of the insurance laws in the District of Columbia, the facts shown in this record amply demonstrate." It cited the assumption of "fantastic liabilities . . . without the adequate reserves which sound insurance principles have proved to be necessary as a means of protection."

Confusion Over Arbor Day Has U.S. Officials Up a Tree

Agriculture Department Doesn't Know Whether It Celebrated Yesterday; There Seem to Be Several Dates for Observance

This Arbor Day business has officials up the tree.

Agriculture Department officials say Arbor Day should be on April 10, the birthday of its founder, J. Sterling Morton, of Nebraska. They point out that Morton was once a Secretary of Agriculture and started the day because there were so few trees in Nebraska then.

The department, with the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, decided to celebrate the day by planting a Nebraska elm on the Mall yesterday, but at a late hour last night no one knew how it turned out. C. Marshall Finnan said he had not heard whether the program went through, and referred the question to August H. Hanson, who, in turn, said he did not know whether Arbor Day was celebrated.

The United States Forest Service officials did not know, and elsewhere it was explained that the Commissioners 15 years ago ruled that Arbor Day should be on the third Friday in April. The Board of Education, however, has decided to plant a red maple at the Brightwood School on April 18, a date incompatible with those fixed by the Commissioners and the Department of Agriculture.

The almanac says the day is variously observed, which seems to be the case.

3 Offspring Kill Male Polar Bear

Milwaukee, April 10 (AP).—Borealis, 27-year-old male Polar bear at the Washington Park Zoo, was clawed to death in his cage today by three of his offspring, a female and two males, 9 and 10 years old. Ernest Untermann, Zoo director, said he could not account for the killing except the offspring were suffering from "spring fever."

Officials to Try Meal at Occoquan

The balance, nutritional value and up-to-dateness of menus in District institutions will be discussed Wednesday over a "prize" luncheon at the Occoquan Workhouse.

Guests from the Federal Bureau of Prisons and various District agencies will eat a 35-cent meal worked out in a series of contests between institutional chefs.

High Pay, Like Measles, Catching, Says Andrews

Chicago, April 10 (AP).—Elmer F. Andrews said tonight that he had found some evidence while administering the Fair Labor Standards act that "high wages, like the measles, are 'catching.'"

In an address for delivery before the Industrial Relations Association, he added that "Certainly it is something more than a coincidence that those communities where the wage level generally is high are also the communities in which business is relatively good."

Pastor Sees U. S. Paralyzed By Propaganda

K. of C. Speaker Says Nation Is Helpless to Combat War Forces

The American public is "absolutely paralyzed and hypnotized" by powerful propaganda interests working to bring this country into another "war to insure peace," the Rev. John K. Cartwright, S. T. L., pastor of Immaculate Conception Church, declared last night at the Washington General Assembly, fourth degree, Knights of Columbus.

Speaking at the Mayflower Hotel, Dr. Cartwright said the people of this country seem "helpless to combat" forces promoting war "not to save democracy, but the democracies, because of breaking down of American democracy into a "suffrage of selfishness."

Says Schools Have Failed

The danger to democracy comes not "from blasphemers abroad, who at least have the courage to say what they mean," but forces boring from within for disguised purposes, the cleric said.

Because the safeguarding influence of democratic and religious tradition on the people as a mass is growing continually less, there is a constant threat to democracy, and particularly its Jeffersonian ideals of free education and religion, he said.

That American free general education has not achieved the "superb ideal we had hoped for" is evidenced, according to the speaker, by the success of propaganda in this country.

Forum Check Presented

Emphasizing that the virtues and traditions of the past" are not self-perpetuating, he urged the assembled Knights and their guests to combat "class license and class suffrage" through adherence to religious faith and democracy.

Others who spoke were the Rev. John P. Gallagher, S. J., assistant pastor of St. Aloysius Church, who was presented a check in appreciation of a recent series of forum lectures, and Francis A. McCann, Faithful Navigator. Henry I. Quinn, former School Board member, was toastmaster.

Final preparations were completed last night for the National Safety Council's dinner to Governors of winning States and Mayors of winning cities in the Nation-wide 1938 traffic safety contest. The affair will be held Thursday at the Mayflower Hotel.

Dr. George Gallup, director of the American Institute of Public Opinion, will speak and will later be heard from WJSV on a national radio hookup with Eddie Cantor, speaking from Hollywood.

All 48 States and 1,163 cities participated in the contest, the National Safety Council reported. In addition to prizes and honorable mentions, the council lists 157 cities which had no traffic fatalities last year.

Milwaukee, which tied with Cleveland for first in the biggest city group, won the grand prize in 1934 and first in its population group in 1933, 1934, 1935 and 1937.

The grand prize for states was won by New Jersey. States placing first in the various divisions were Oklahoma, Iowa and Washington.

Street Seeks Successor as Welfare Chief

Reveals He Has Asked Social Service Groups For Suggestions

Elwood Street, who recently resigned as director of Public Welfare to accept a job in Richmond, yesterday said he is endeavoring to find a well-qualified person to recommend as his successor.

He has written the American Public Welfare Association, the Joint Vocational Service and the Civil Service Commission, he said, to ask suggestions.

Members of the welfare board select the person they wish as director and recommend his appointment by the Commissioners.

This was seen yesterday as shutting out the possibility of Burdette Lewis becoming a candidate to succeed Street, who was assailed by Lewis in the latter's recent report on local relief.

One application for Street's position already has been received, he said yesterday. Possible candidates for the job named in rumors among welfare workers include William Savin, director of the Family Service Association, and Ray L. Huff, superintendent of penal institutions.

Corcoran Courts Safe, Slattery Tells Congress

Harry Slattery, Acting Secretary of the Interior, yesterday informed Congress that the 400 War Department employes slated to occupy the Corcoran Courts Apartments temporarily, will not be exposed to hazards through structural weaknesses in the building.

Submitting a report of a special committee of three engineers in response to a House resolution, Slattery also informed Congress that a recommendation of the engineers that an additional exit be provided has been adopted.

The committee pointed out, however, that the Walker Building, which houses the Coal Commission, is 15 stories high and has but one exit.

unions took place under auspices of the Girl Scouts and United States Secret Service. One of the more difficult cases involved an 11-year-old boy who, his mother said, "is going to be very hard to find because he's so big he wouldn't look lost."

A Red Cross ambulance crew gave first aid to ten children scratched or bruised, two youthful patients arriving for treatment shortly after a toe-to-toe fist fight by the big fountain. Twenty people fainted during the day.

Several thousand cheering children and grownups crowded close to the south portico of the White House when President Roosevelt stepped out at noon to wave a gay welcome.

"This is the seventh time Mrs. Roosevelt and I have had the great privilege of having you here on Easter Monday," he recalled. "I wish I could be down there with you."

As the President returned to his desk, the First Lady joined her guests on the lawn. Six White House guards cleared a path for her.

Dressed in a colorful blue ensemble, Mrs. Roosevelt stopped to chat with Boy Scouts, cameramen, musicians of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club Band and a 2-year-old girl who merely said "no" when her hostess asked why she was crying.

Secret Service Busy

Secret service men were stationed by the wrought-iron gates to break up the once-flourishing racket of children who hired themselves out to adults eager to attend the festival. Until 3 p. m. no adults were admitted unless escorting a child under 12.

Mrs. Roosevelt on her two tours of the lawn "escorted" 7-year-old Diana Hopkins, daughter of the Secretary of Commerce. The First Lady gave a party for Diana and two dozen other youngsters in the afternoon. It was the first egg-rolling since 1933 with none of the Roosevelt grandchildren on hand.

The President entered the White House by the tradesmen's entrance when he drove from Union Station after his return from Warm Springs, Ga. He usually uses the driveway curving along the south lawn.

Forty groundkeepers will be at work on the lawn today.

False Fire Alarm To Aid Stork Nets 6 Months in Jail

A false alarm is a false alarm even if designed to get help for a "blessed event." Thus, Carl Davis, 48, colored 1500 Bells court northwest, was given six months in jail yesterday by Police Judge Edward M. Curran.

The woman concerned, unnamed in court, after being visited three times by Georgetown University Hospital physicians, went to Gallinger Hospital. Davis said he thought on her return from the hospital the stork was about to arrive. So he turned in the alarm. Eight fire engines responded.

Children Find Parents Shot Dead

Elizabeth, N. J., April 10 (U.P.).—Stanley Gawronski, 55, gave his 12-year-old daughter, Johanna, 50 cents today and told her to take her brother, John 11, to the movies. Just before the children left the house, Gawronski put $590 in a bureau drawer and told them "this is for you."

When they returned tonight, the children found Gawronski had shot his wife, 43, dead and then shot himself.

Court Upholds Wire-Tapping

New York, April 10.—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals, in a decision in which it upheld evidence obtained through the tapping of intrastate telephone messages, today affirmed the conviction of two physicians, a lawyer and an insurance agent on charges of defrauding insurance companies in connection with the filing of fraudulent claims for total disability payments.

President to Recall Nomination Of Amlie to ICC at His Request

modified rail-aid legislation program.

Amlie's appointment caused a storm of protest. It set in motion a controversy, in fact, which kept up for weeks. Amlie was questioned at length by the Johnson sub-committee. Opponents charged that he was a Communist. Amlie, while in Congress, had proposed that the Government take over and operate industry.

As part of this general concept, he favored Government ownership of railroads. Amlie was defeated for re-election last November.

There was considerable speculation as to what the President would say in his reply to Amlie. Senators who recalled the tenor of his letter to Judge Floyd H. Roberts, of Bristol, Va., after the latter had been rejected by the Senate for a Federal judgeship, wondered if it would bristle with the same fighting attitude.

Reports were circulated at the Capitol that the President might name former Governor Elmer Benson, of Minnesota, in place of Amlie. John Carson, secretary to the late Senator Couzens, of Michigan, and now consumers' counsel for the National Bituminous Coal Commission, also has been mentioned as a possibility.

Benson, a Farmer-Laborite, was defeated for re-election last fall. He served in the Senate for a time, and this fact, it is surmised, might help to secure confirmation. There were reports in some quarters, however, of bitter opposition.

Officials Attend Cafe Opening

Members of Congress, fishermen and government officials were feted last night at a preview opening of the Neptune Room, Washington's newest seafood cafe, in the Earle Building.

Bernard and Raymond Lurba were hosts to more than 200 diners. Charles E. Jackson, acting Commissioner of Fisheries, was toastmaster.

Among those present were Senator "Cotton Ed" Smith, Representatives Millard Caldwell, William M. Colmer, Martin F. Smith and A. Willis Robertson; Ira N. Gabrielson, chief of the Bureau of Biological Survey; Maj. Daniel Donovan, District auditor; Lawrence Richey, secretary to former President Hoover, and officials of the Izaak Walton League.

Torrio Pleads Guilty, Faces 12-Year Term

Old-Time Gang Chief, 2 Others Admit Tax Frauds Against U. S.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 10.—Johnny (The Immune) Torrio, deciding he wasn't immune to relentless Government prosecution, pleaded guilty today to a charge of $86,000 income tax evasion.

The maximum penalty is 12 years in prison and $30,000 fine. Sentencing was set for Wednesday.

The sudden reversal ended his trial, started March 29, and canceled tentative Government plans to bring Al Capone to New York to testify against Torrio, generally known as Capone's tutor in Chicago's old racket-ridden days.

A deposition taken from Capone in Alcatraz, the Government indicated, contained the true story behind the lawless reign before it was wrecked, likewise by prosecution on income tax evasion charges.

Torrio's brother-in-law, William Slockbower, and James La Penna, codefendants, also changed their pleas to guilty.

Federal Judge John W. Clancy declared a mistrial for the other two defendants, Louis V. La Cava and John D. Agostino.

Torrio was linked by Government witnesses to widespread liquor operations both in Chicago and New York.

N.Y. Judge Indicted On Bribe Charge

New York, April 10 (U.P.).—Judge George W. Martin, of Kings County Court, Brooklyn, was indicted today by a special grand jury which charged him with accepting a $1,000 bribe to dismiss an abortion indictment.

The judge, if convicted, would be liable to 20 years' imprisonment and $9,000 fine, as well as permanent disqualification for public office.

Britain Bidding For Bulgars' Aid

Sofia, Bulgaria, April 10 (U.P.).—The British government is making last minute efforts to secure Bulgarian friendship, it was learned tonight in diplomatic quarters.

Many, however, believed the efforts are too late and that if the Balkans situation becomes critical and Bulgaria is forced to choose sides, she will favor Italy and Germany.

British Minister George Rendle conferred over the week-end with Bulgarian Prime Minister George Kiosseivanoff.

Slattery, Smith Mentioned for Lewis' Seat

Gov. Horner Seeks Middle Roader to Avert Party Friction

The names of two Chicago Democrats, James M. Slattery, chairman of the Illinois Commerce Commission, and Representative T. V. Smith, ardent New Dealer, last night were prominently mentioned among possible successors to the Senate seat of the late J. Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois.

Gov. Horner was reliably reported seeking a candidate who would not only be acceptable to the reigning State administration but to the formerly hostile Kelly-Nash machine as well, in order to stave off a factional fight that might mean defeat of the State Democratic ticket in 1940.

Never a Candidate

Slattery, who has never run for elective office, was one of Gov. Horner's campaign managers in 1936 against Kelly-Nash opposition, but in the recent mayoralty campaign was equally active back-stage for the Kelly-Nash ticket. He has been mentioned as a possible gubernatorial candidate in 1940 and if appoined to the Senate might hold his seat for only two years.

Definitely in the picture also was Representative Smith, a close personal friend of Horner, and also believed acceptable to the machine. Some of Horner's close political advisers were known to be urging appointment of Smith as "a man who can win" for the Democratic ticket, when the seat is put to a vote two years hence.

A colorful campaigner, Smith led the ticket as Congressman-at-large in 1938 when Senator Lucas was winning only by a small margin. Smith also was viewed here as one of the few Chicago Democrats who had strong "downstate" pulling power.

Must Appoint Successor

Under Illinois statutes, the Governor must appoint a successor to Lewis who would serve until the choice could be submitted to the voters in the next Congressional election. Lewis' term does not expire until 1942. Thus a Senator must be elected in November, 1940, to fill the two-year vacancy until the regular full-term election in 1942.

That the next Senator will come from Chicago appeared pre-determined by tradition, which has long divided the two Senate seats between Cook County (Chicago) and downstate. Horner championed this division in the last primary campaign when he supported Lucas, a downstater from Havana, Ill., against the Chicago Kelly-Nash machine candidate, Michael L. Igoe.

Igoe has since been appointed a Federal judge, and it was regarded as unlikely he would relinquish that life-time post for an uncertain Senate tenure, although it was believed he could have the appointment if he wished as a gesture of good will to the Kelly-Nash faction.

Eyes on G. O. P. Gains

Inroads by Republicans in the mayoralty contest, when Dwight H. Green received 637,107 votes, the largest ever received by a Republican candidate for mayor, against 820,517 for Mayor Edward Kelly, render it highly unlikely Horner would name anyone unacceptable to Kelly. Every Democratic move in Illinois is expected to strengthen the present rapprochement between the two factions for a united front in the next elections.

Other names figuring in yesterday's speculation on Senator Lewis' successor included Thomas J. Courtney, Cook County State's attorney, who deserted the machine to oppose Kelly in the primaries, and Representative Benjamin S. Adamowski, minority floor leader in the Illinois House.

Senate to Pay Highest Tribute To Lewis With State Funeral

Out of respect for Senator J. Hamilton Lewis, who died in Garfield Hospital Sunday night of a heart attack, the flag atop the Senate Office Building was placed at half staff by Officer John W. Dinsmore. Services for Senator Lewis will be held Wednesday in the Senate

President Roosevelt, Cabinet and Supreme Court to Attend Rites at Capitol Tomorrow; Burial to Be in Arlington or Cathedral

By the Associated Press.

The Senate expressed its sorrow yesterday at the death of Senator James Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, the Democratic "whip," and arranged to give him a State funeral—the highest last tribute it can pay.

The service will be held at 2:30 p. m. in the Senate chamber tomorrow, attended by President Roosevelt, the Supreme Court, the Cabinet and the Diplomatic Corps, as well as the Senate. All legislative business was laid aside until after it.

Interment will be in Arlington Cemetery or Washington Cathedral.

It is Mrs. Lewis' wish that he be buried at Arlington, but while her husband had seen military service, it was as a member of the National Guard and only veterans of the regular Army are eligible for interment in Arlington. Friends in the Senate suggested that a special resolution might be adopted by Congress today to dispose of that objection.

In a brief session, the Senate heard three Senators—Lucas, of Illinois, and the majority and minority leaders, Barkley, of Kentucky, and McNary, of Oregon—praise Lewis and then adjourned in respect to his memory. It adopted a resolution expressing "profound sorrow and deep regret."

There were expressions of regret, too, from President Roosevelt, Secretary of State Hull and other high Government officials.

Senate Naval Group Votes 15 New Bases

Guam Plan Dropped, But Army Will Ask Fund In River-Harbor Bill

As the world watched developments in war-threatened Europe, fortification of America's sea frontiers was voted yesterday in Congress.

The Senate Naval Affairs Committee unanimously approved legislation to establish 15 naval air bases in the mid-Pacific, Alaska, Puerto Rico and United States proper to keep any aggressor at arm's length from North or South America.

As had been expected, the proposed $5,000,000 development of Guam, located among the Japanese mandate islands, was dropped from the measure.

Chairman Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, of the committee, however, said the War Department had informed him that $4,500,000 for development of the harbor at Guam had been recommended by the Army engineers for inclusion in this year's rivers and harbors act.

Supply Base Approved

"All members of the committee favored the development of Guam as proposed by the Navy," he declared, "but after informal discussion we decided to leave it for authorization in the rivers and harbors bill. As the House has voted against it we might otherwise delay or endanger the whole bill."

The committee voted to report another naval measure already approved by the House, providing a $6,500,000 major supply base at Oakland, Calif.

From the Interstate Commerce Committee, the House received the Administration bill to inaugurate a large civil air pilot training program, as a war reserve. The measure provides for training 15,000 youths the first year, and thereafter an unlimited number for the next four years. The Administration plan calls for 20,000 a year.

The $513,000,000 Army appropriation bill will be taken up in the House today and sent to conference with the Senate over amendments made by the latter body, officials said. Conferees are to meet Thursday.

House Fund Increased

In reporting the Naval air base bill, the Senate committee added $16,000,000 to the amount approved by the House. Providing $17,000,000 for a new major air base, at Jacksonville, Fla., with an outlying seaplane base at Banana River, Florida, and $1,000,000 for purchase of land at Quonset Point, R. I., for later development of another major air base, the committee raised the cost of the measure to $65,000,000.

A screen of "listening posts" at outlying American possessions in the Pacific would be established by the bill, in addition to major bases in Alaska, Hawaii and Puerto Rico. Midway, Wake, Johnston and Palmyra Islands would be developed as bases for planes patrolling the western Pacific.

The proposed bases at San Juan, Puerto Rico and Kodiak, Alaska, are considered of major importance. Large patrol planes operating from the former could dominate not only the approaches to the Panama Canal through the Caribbean islands but also much of the east coast of South America.

War Plan Outlined

New York, April 10 (AP).—The Government's plan to attempt "to synchronize the mobilization of manpower with the mobilization of supplies" in the event of war was described today by Assistant Secretary of War Johnson.

The program, he said in presenting commissions in the Quartermaster Reserve Corps to 48 insurance company employes, was to have an "initial protective force" of 400,000 Regulars and National Guardsmen and to recruit additional men only as rapidly as industrial mobilization went forward.

"With the co-operation of industry," he added, "we have worked out a plan which we trust will enable us at the end of six months (of war) to establish a regular flow of munitions of excellent quality for as many men as can properly be mustered and trained."

Two Navy Fliers Killed in Crash

San Diego, Calif., April 10 (AP).—Lieut. T. C. Guthrie and Lieut. G. L. Dunagan died in their Navy scouting plane today when it crashed and burned after a wing crumpled. They had circled for a landing on an emergency Navy field at Del Mar.

The officers were from Scouting Squadron No. 2, normally attached to the aircraft carrier U. S. S. Lexington.

President Confers With Secretary Hull

Byrnes Proposes U. S. Barter Grain, Cotton for War Supplies

go higher than price levels set in the treaties. This Government would make the same pledge to hold rubber and tin in reserve.

Asked if the stocks would be accessible earlier in event of war, Byrnes said he would have no objection to such a provision but declared the price condition "should take care of that." Should a European war develop, he said prices of all commodities subject to the treaty automatically would go above the "peg" prices to be set in the treaties.

2,000,000 Bales of Cotton

Byrnes said he thought a "minimum" of 2,000,000 bales of the Government's 11,250,000-bale loan cotton surplus might be disposed of under the international trade. He would not estimate the volume of wheat to be sold.

Rubber and tin were two of the "strategic war materials" to be acquired by this Government for defense emergencies under the $40,000,000 authorization recently passed by the Senate and now pending in the House. Byrnes said the proposed exchange would in no way interfere with purposes of that bill. Later, he said, the new "exchange" program might be extended to other countries, on a strictly "strategic material" basis and involving no products produced in any volume in this country.

Minimum reserves of rubber recommended by the War and Navy departments are estimated at 266,000 tons, valued at $85,000,000, and Byrnes said a stock of 1,250,000,000 pounds, the amount consumed by American industries in a year, would be advisable. The Army and Navy have recommended a $65,000,000 reserve supply of tin.

Britain Welcomes Plan

The British and Dutch, who produce 96 per cent of the rubber used, are now restricting rubber production to 50 per cent of normal capacity and tin output to 40 per cent. Byrnes said he thought the opportunity to supplement production of these commodities will appeal to Britain and Holland.

Associated Press dispatches from London last night said there were indications Britain might welcome a proposal for large scale exchange of commodities and the European democracies generally would welcome any assistance in the form of raw materials.

Before the trade could be consummated, the Commodity Credit Corporation would have to acquire title of cotton held on loans and to this end legislation has been proposed to pay farmers $1.25 a bale to clear title. Actual purchases of rubber and tin would be made through the procurement division of the Treasury and the stocks stored under Army and Navy jurisdiction.

Price Increases Feared

How to dispose of Government loan cotton stocks without glutting the market has been one of the baffling farm questions of the session. A recent Senate bill to permit farmers to repossess 3,000,000 bales has been pigeonholed in the House. Byrnes argued the provision for purchasing governments to hold the cotton for five years would keep the surplus off the market and guard against dumping.

Byrnes said he had "serious misgivings" about what would happen in the way of rubber and tin price increases and factory "shut downs" if war developed and America lacked these reserve supplies.

Tentative approval was given the plan by a group of Senators representing the East and West, including Senators Lucas, of Illinois; La Follette, of Wisconsin; Clark, of Missouri; Bankhead, of Alabama, and Russell, of Georgia.

"Strategic" Purchases Backed

The State Department said that "from the American point of view" it would be most useful to acquire for long term storage reserve stocks of certain materials not produced in the United States, or produced only in limited quantities under disadvantageous circumstances.

The department pointed to pending strategic war materials legislation and urged its passage.

"The appropriations available under such legislation, however," the statement said, "will not be sufficient to make possible the acquisition of adequate supplies.

"Therefore, if it proves to be possible to secure some of these supplies by direct exchange for some of our surplus wheat and cotton which other governments might wish to store for emergencies, such interchange ought to be mutually beneficial."

Worried Over Trade

The Byrnes statement came amid much evidence of Administration concern over disastrous effects on international trade of continued expansion by the totalitarian powers.

Secretary of State Hull and Treasury Secretary Morgenthau had separate train conferences with President Roosevelt immediately upon the chief executive's return from Warm Springs, Ga. Later, Secretary Hull told newspapermen that the war threats are keeping private business hopelessly alarmed and are driving vast amounts of European money to this country, thereby sharply cutting the purchasing power of overseas lands.

Secretary Morgenthau said the treasury was prepared to meet any possible contingencies abroad.

Guards Avoid Armory Site Controversy

The District National Guard wants a new armory and it doesn't particularly care about the location. The District appropriation bill, as passed by the House, provides $150,000 for a site—but it must be in Southwest Washington.

The Park and Planning Commission, however, wants it at the foot of East Capitol street. Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, National Guard commander, wants "no part" of the controversy.

"All we want is a new armory," said Gen. Cox. "We don't care where they put it. Wherever the armory goes is up to Congress."

The only available site in Southwest, according to a recent survey, is between Fort Humphreys and the river—almost over the old James Creek Canal. Gen. Cox admitted there would be advantages to this site, because it is close to the Army War College.

Those opposed to the Southwest site—among them civic leaders and service officers—contend the site is inaccessible as there is no transportation system within a wide radius. They also point out that the Government now owns six squares on East Capitol street where the Planning Commission advocates a site and the purchase of any other acreage would be a needless expense.

British Warships Put on Alert In Greek and Turkish Waters

British

ress is being made in British negotiations with Rumania and Turkey that Chamberlain is expected to announce the British pledge of protection to all three countries before the Parliament Thursday.

Rumania's minister to London, V. V. Tilles, tonight notified the British government of his country's willingness to conclude an Anglo-Rumanian defensive agreement.

Britain's cabinet again will meet Thursday morning, before Parliament assembles, to study final exchanges of messages with Bucharest, Ankara and Athens and to help the prime minister frame his dramatic "Message of Peace" to the world.

Italian Attack Feared

While London seethed with momentous developments in the making, Britain's military and naval general staffs were disturbed by huge Italian troop movements in the eastern and northeastern Mediterranean.

Fearing these Fascist military activities in the Dodecanese Islands mean that Italy intends to launch an offensive against Greece and Turkey with the aid of Bulgaria, British naval reinforcements were being rushed tonight in that direction from naval bases in the Mediterranean.

(A dispatch from Britain's heavily fortified naval base at Malta said all coastal antiaircraft defenses were manned as a precautionary measure.)

Channel Fleet Alert

British, Dutch and French warships were in a state of semimobilization, not only in the Mediterranean, but also in the English Channel and along other western European coastlines.

Certain formidable units of Britain's navy, it was learned, were ordered to occupy positions at three strategic points near the Greek coast. These were near the islands of Corfu, Crete and off another point at the southwestern end of Greece.

[Though disposition of Britain's warships and exact movements were kept secret, it was known that Britain has 5 battleships, 6 cruisers, 1 aircraft carrier, 60 destroyers, 20 submarines, 30 torpedo boats, minelayers and supply ships in her Mediterranean fleet, the Associated Press said.—Editor's note.]

60,000 Italians at Rhodes

As protection for Turkey, some units will proceed to points near the Dardanelles to prepare for attack and also to help blockade the Bulgarian coast.

The latest information reaching London tonight indicates Italy has established 60,000 troops on the Island of Rhodes, largest of the Dodecanese group, and other islands under Italian domination in the vicinity.

A large Italian air force and considerable naval strength has taken hold in the same vicinity, according to these reports.

In authoritative circles it was said Britain's assurances to Greece and the government's warning to Italy, transmitted in Rome yesterday, included a blunt statement that London would regard as an "unfriendly act" any Italian attempt to halt British ships in the Adriatic or in the vicinity of Corfu.

(Four Russian warships were seen passing through the Dardanelles en route to the Aegean Sea on Saturday. But since that time they have not been reported. In informed circles it was assumed these Soviet war vessels have taken positions in the Aegean in order to be in position to halt possible Italian naval aggression in the Black Sea.)

Some of the Dodecanese islands, now said to be filled with Italian troops, are within two or three miles of the Turkish mainland. But Turkey, in recent years, has strongly fortified this section of the coast.

A significant agreement regarding the possibility of an outbreak of war in the Balkans was concluded by Rumania and Turkey, it was learned. In recent negotiations Turkey agreed that all ships of powers supporting Rumania in war will have right of way through the Dardanelles, according to a high London source.

This agreement had much to do with hastening the lineup of Greece, Rumania and Turkey with Britain and France, both powerful naval nations.

The British cabinet also decided to push Anglo-French attempts to bring Russia into a "protective pact" against Reichsfuehrer Hitler and Premier Mussolini.

When the cabinet convened this morning it was the first Easter Monday meeting since the World War. Twenty of Chamberlain's closest advisors attended. Only Lord Runciman and Malcolm MacDonald, secretary for colonies, were absent.

The meeting ended at 1:15 p. m. (8:15 a. m., Eastern standard time) after which the prime minister's "inner cabinet" held a session in Chamberlain's 10 Downing street residence beginning at 4 p. m. (11 a. m. Eastern standard time).

An hour and a half later the second meeting broke up. This was attended by Chamberlain, Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer; Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax; Sir Thomas Inskip, secretary of state for dominion affairs; Sir Samuel Hoare, home secretary; Oliver Stanley, president of the Board of Trade; Lord Chatfield, admiral of the fleet, and W. S. Morrison, chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

Netherlands on Guard

Passengers who landed in England from the hook of Holland said the Maas River was closed to shipping for 12 hours yesterday when it was controlled by Dutch warships reportedly laying mines along all land and sea approaches to Rotterdam.

During the night Dutch warships were drawn up along quays at the hook, their glaring searchlights playing on all incoming ships.

Soldiers were on duty behind sand-bagged machine-gun emplacements on the quays, the passengers said. Even restaurants along the waterfront were converted into military dormitories and waiting rooms were turned into temporary munition depots.

Only authorized persons were permitted to approach the piers leading to England-bound ships. Some travelers said they were delayed three hours while waiting for permission to enter the quays.

Atlantic Airline Ready, Trippe Tells Authority

The Government yesterday moved into the final stage of extended proceedings which will soon culminate in the licensing of regular transatlantic mail and passenger flights, carrying passengers and mail.

Juan Trippe, president of Pan-American Airways, yesterday told the Civil Aeronautics Authority, "We are now in a position to undertake transatlantic air service."

Trippe's apperaance was in support of the company's application for a certificate and a request for at least $2,758,213 mail subsidy.

Ecuadorian Paper Sees Nazi Therat to Galapagos Islands

Quito, Ecuador, April 10 (U.P.).—Possibility that Germany may seek to annex the Galapagos Islands, Ecuadorian possessions 1,000 miles southwest of the Panama Canal, was suggested today by the independent newspaper El Comercio.

In an editorial entitled "Germany in the Galapagos," El Comercio said there is danger that Germans who reside in the group may demand annexation to the greater Reich in accordance with the international policy of Reichsfuehrer Hitler.

Representative Izac (Democrat), of California, recently introduced a bill in the United States House of Representatives providing for the purchase of the Galapagos Islands as a naval base. The group which is in a position to control the Pacific approaches to the Panama Canal, consists of 12 large and several hundred small islands.

Duce Begins Making Fascists Of Albanians

Provisional President Tells People of Italy's 'Sacrifices'

Tirana, April 10 (AP).—Italy tightened her grip on Albania today with fresh movements of troops into the conquered kingdom, inspired statements of Albanian acceptance of Fascism and a proclamation threatening marital law. The invasion developed into a campaign to bring Albania's 1,000,000 population into full acceptance of Fascist rule.

Gen. Alfredo Guzzoni, the Italian commander, warned of "inexorable martial law" against anyone challenging the Italian occupation.

The same proclamation said: "The soldiers under my orders who won at Vittorio Veneto (Italian victory over the Austrians in the World War) and in Ethiopia and emerged victoriously as legionnaires in the Spanish war have come for a great and fraternal mission of peace and collaboration."

Provisional Government

His proclamation followed humble radio appeals by speakers introduced as the president and secretary of a provisional administrative committee of Albanians expressing thanks for the Italian occupation and asking for an Albanian Fascist party.

The eventual form of government still is to be announced, but for the present Tirana is under the provisional committee of Albanians who take orders from Gen. Guzzoni.

The president of the provisional council, Zhafer Ipi, said in his broadcast which was relayed over all Italian radio stations:

"We have had Albanian independence for 26 years but in the past 15 years (under exiled Zog, first as President and later as King) we have not been able to show the civilized world that we, who are in the heart of Europe, have been capable of governing ourselves."

"Moral Sacrifice"

Then he spoke of Premier Mussolini as having made "moral and material sacrifices for us" and appealed to him to "save the Albanian people."

Mihal Sherko was named commissioner for foreign affairs in the provisional government. Portfolios for domestic affairs were filled by members of former governments.

The provisional administrative committee telegraphed Count Ciano, Italy's foreign minister, expressing the hope the Italian minister, Francesco Jacomoni di San Savino, would be permitted to remain in Albania and be raised to a rank of office which "the Fascist government will think fit."

It was announced today the Albanian franc would retain the same value it has had. This was taken as an indication that the gold franc (worth about 23 cents) would be retained as the currency.

Wife Says Draft-Dodger Bergdoll Will Serve His Sentence

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Mrs. Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, wife of the notorious World War draft dodger, is shown with her attorney Harry Weinberger as she announced that her husband would return to this country from Germany to serve the remainder of his five-year sentence. Son Erwin, 5, is in her arms; Alfred, 11, standing, and the girls, Emma, 10, and Minna, 9 airplane pilot and was constantly in trouble for speeding.

When the United States entered the World War in 1917 he was 23. In July, 1918, when the draft board mailed him a questionnaire, he ignored it. His case was turned over to the adjutant general of Pennsylvania and Berdoll was ordered to report for military duty on August 8.

Instead of reporting he became a fugitive, and for months he sent the draft board taunting postcards from all parts of the country. On January 7, 1920, he was arrested in the Bergdoll "castle" in West Philadelphia. He was found in a window seat, hiding under cushions.

He was courtmartialed, convicted of desertion and sentenced to be dishonorably discharged after serving 5 years at hard labor at Fort Jay, Governors Island, N. Y.

Bergdoll didn't waste much time brooding. He began talking about a fortune he had buried in the hills of Maryland—a pot of gold worth about $105,000—and before long he had the commandant's permission to go to Maryland to dig it up.

Two sergeants went with him. They drove to Philadelphia and there had engine trouble, so they went to the Bergdoll castle.

The next day Grover was lounging with his guards in an upstairs room when the telephone rang. Grover answered it and didn't come back. The sergeants heard the roar of a car at the rear of the house, and saw Bergdoll driving away. He got to Germany by way of Canada, and settled in Eberbach, the home town of his mother, Mrs. Emma C. Bergdoll.

His wife said today she doesn't expect much difficulty in having her husband surrender. In Washington a State Department official said Weinberger had tried to obtain a passport for Bergdoll, but was told Bergdoll is no longer a citizen.

During the early years of Bergdoll's exile, Americans who were determined to see him serve his sentence twice tried to kidnap him. Carl Neuff and Franz Zimmer attempted to drag him from his automobile in January, 1921, but he sped away. The two men and four Germans were sentenced to prison, but quickly pardoned by the German government.

When four men waylaid him in an Eberbach Hotel, August 11, 1923, Bergdoll shot and killed one, Carl Schmidt, and severely bit another. The three survivors and a chauffeur were sentenced to jail for short terms. The United States War Department denied any conection with the abduction attempt.

His Mother Cheered

Philadelphia, April 10 (AP).—The aged mother who said she always wanted Grover Bergdoll to "come home and face the music" was cheered tonight by word he would sail for the United States next week.

At her home in a suburb, his mother, Mrs. Emma C. Bergdoll, who will be 78 in July, said:

"I am so lonely. I need him to help me."

U. S. Won't Object

By the Associated Press.

Attorney General Murphy said yesterday the Justice Department would certainly interpose no objection to the return to this country of Grover Cleveland Bergdoll to serve his sentence.

It he returns, Bergdoll will be in a position to renew his claim to property valued at approximately $500,000. Some weeks ago the Justice Department rejected his claim to the property seized by the alien property custodian during the war. A department official said the claim was denied on grounds that Bergdoll was a fugitive from justice.

Gibraltar, Malta On the Alert

London, April 10.—With tension still high as a result of Premier Mussolini's invasion of Albania, the British government, it was disclosed, is taking sweeping defense precautions throughout the Mediterranean areas.

Dispatches from Malta and Gibraltar, the two Mediterranean bases, stated that officers and men of the fleet on Easter leave had been ordered to rejoin their ships immediately. A number of officers who had been taking a holiday at Tangiers returned to their ships at Gibraltar last night.

Dispatches from Marseilles said that an unspecified number of British destroyers originally due at Alexandria, Egypt, next week, were already en route and would arrive day after tomorrow. There are reports in Cairo that the whole Mediterranean fleet is coming to Alexandria, but these reports were denied tonight at the admiralty.

Greek Premier Says Regime Is 'On Vigil'

Zog's Family Expected To Go to Egypt to Avoid Embarrassment

By the Associated Press.

Athens, April 10. — Premier George Metaxas, disturbed by presence of Italian troops on Greece's frontier, assured the Greek people today his government was determined to defend the nation's independence.

Albania's refugee royal family was expected tonight to resume its flight to Egypt shortly because it might become politically embarrassing if it were to remain in Greece.

"In order to remove all disquiet from Greek public opinion," a government broadcast message said, "the Greek government declares that it has all elements so as to be in a position to give the Greek people assurance that Greek independence and integrity are fully secured.

"The Greek people may quietly continue peaceful works with full confidence that the government is on vigil for Greece's safety and honor."

A source of anxiety for Greece were reports at Piraeus of recent landings of Italian troops and large consignments of munitions on all islands of Italy's Dodecanese group, in the Aegan Sea, particularly on Rhodes, the largest.

King Zog took his family to Volo, on the Aegean coast, on the way to the Greek summer resort, Bortaria, where his 23-year-old queen, Geraldine, can recover from the ordeal of her flight from Albania two days after the birth of her son.

With the King and Queen were Crown Prince Skander, now 5 days old, and the King's three unmarried sisters, Princesses Myseyen, Ruhije and Maxhide, who visited the United States last year. The royal entourage included 115 persons.

Queen Geraldine, daughter of an American mother and Hungarian nobleman father, was reported to have suffered intensely from physical and mental shock in her sudden flight from Tirana, Albania's conquered capital. She was under constant attendance of two physicians and a nurse.

Geraldine was said to have suffered two hemorrhages on the jolting drive over mountain roads to the frontier.

Persons who know the tortuous mountain road which Geraldine had to travel in a makeshift ambulance to reach Florina, Greece, from Tirana expressed amazement that she survived the experience. They said only part of the road was surfaced. Her cries could be heard in the streets when the ambulance reached Florina Saturday after a 14-hour trip.

Italy Calls 330,000 More Men; U. S. Warned Not to Meddle

Italy

Italy for her pacific undertaking of civilization in Albania;" American suggestion that either Yugoslavia or Greece are menaced by Italy merely proves that America is collaborating with Britain in a campaign of encirclement; against this "it is only natural that Italy, like Germany, should defend herself by every means in every way to avoid being caught in the snare of the demoplutocracies."

In reports to Italy, Italian correspondents who have now gone to Albania, refute earlier official reports that practically no opposition was encountered in the landing. One of these reveals that the first landing of Italian troops at Durazzo was beaten back by the disciplined and well-directed fire of the defenders and that the fort had to be bombarded by warships with medium caliber guns before a landing could be made.

This version is supported by photographs of the landing which show buildings damaged by shell fire. The correspondent's account made it abundantly clear that the rapidity of the Italian advance was one of the prime factors in the collapse of the Albanian resistance.

There is still no indication of the formula which will be adopted in Albania, whether its "independence" under a new government will be proclaimed, or whether it will remain a protectorate or be formally incorporated into the expandview of the status quo pledges of the Anglo-Italian pact, a nominal independence would appear most likely.

To Reduce Overhead

In addition to its other recommendations, the revised draft of the Griffenhagen plan proposes the establishment of a Department of Labor in the District Government. This department would absorb the duties of the Unemployment Compensation Board, the Employment Service, the Minimum Wage Board and other services dealing with industrial relations.

Beyond the greater efficiency attainable when related activities are placed under unified supervision, a considerable reduction in overhead administrative costs should result if this proposal is carried out. That there is need for such economies, not only in the District but in all local government, is certain. It is illustrated by Gov. Lehman's appeal to Congress to vote additional funds for administration of unemployment insurance throughout the Nation. If Congress does not act promptly, the Governor warns, the unemployed citizens of New York may find themselves deprived of earned benefits through a forced suspension of the administrative services.

Under the best of conditions the cost of enforcing complicated labor legislation, and especially social insurance laws, is very heavy. This makes it the more incumbent on local government to make every effort to reduce the costs of administration by eliminating overlappng and duplication of activites. That can often be accomplished by mergers, or closer co-operation between separate agencies, of the type which the Griffenhagen experts suggest for Washington.

Government Career Jobs

The hearings before the Ellender committee, investigating charges of favoritism in the Government service, have afforded various subordinates a chance to air their grievances against their superiors. Some of the testimony has been amusing, although it has so far failed to throw much light on the problems of personnel management which are raised by the charges.

However, the hearings are serving a useful purpose in arousing widespread interest in a matter that neither Congress nor the public at large is usually disposed to consider. It is this indifference that accounts to a large extent, no doubt, for delays in reforming and refining present methods of selecting, transferring and promoting civil service employes.

After reading the testimony of witnesses before the Ellender committee one is inclined to believe that both superiors charged with favoritism and subordinates, who believe, rightly or wrongly, that they are discriminated against, are deserving of sympathy. It is obvious that rigid rules of classification or provisions for promotion in strict accord with seniority do not assure selection of the most competent individuals. Yet safeguards against arbitrary preferment of employes are most necessary.

Formal tests to determine the efficiency of clerical and stenographic employes, and even of persons applying for highly specialized positions, are comparatively easy to devise. It is far more difficult to develop plans for recruiting and training individuals for higher administrative posts. Yet if a career service is ever to progress beyond the talking stage promising young men and women must be given encouragement to enter Government employment. Applicants for entry must be carefully selected by trained and dispassionate methods, tenure of office must be safeguarded, and promotion must be based strictly on merit.

The task of developing such standards should have fallen to the Civil Service Commission. But due to pressure of work and inadequate staff, as well as other causes, it has done virtually no work along this line. Fortunately, the newly organized Council of Personnel Administration, set up by executive order, has been charged with the duty of applying the principles and methods of scientific personnel and business management to the Government service. Its members are for the most part newly appointed directors of personnel in the various departments and agencies who, by training and through contact with practical problems, are especially well equipped to improve methods of selection and promotion.

A career service calls for a considerable amount of stability in the executive establishment as well as legislative respect for justified expectations. These prerequisites we do not yet have, but if Congress is presented with a feasible plan for improving the existing system and developing a career service on a modest scale, it may decide to mend its ways and refrain from practices that at present make so-called careers in the Government service a highly precarious and speculative undertaking.

The Collective Pronoun

"I'll be back in the fall, if we don't have a war."

These words, spoken by President Roosevelt to the group assembled at Warm Springs to see him off for Washington, were seemingly wholly unpremeditated. Actually it is proper to surmise that serious consideration preceded their utterance. None knows better than the President that his office makes his most casual public observation subject to interpretation as a matter of national policy. And no President was ever more skillful than Mr. Roosevelt in making the most of every opportunity to give a positive direction to public thinking on important issues.

Most Americans realize today that the sweep of events has now brought Europe to the very verge of war. What is insufficiently realized is the tremendous implications of the impending catastrophe for every citizen of this country. In spite of the best-informed warnings to the contrary many still believe that another world war might leave the United States relatively undisturbed. In spite of the virtual certainty of American involvement there are many who would seek to achieve isolation by panicky legislation, or to seek shelter behind other paper guarantees of immunity.

To those who would protect themselves by closing their eyes the President addressed his warning. Spoken to a little group in Georgia, it is equally applicable to Americans everywhere. "If we don't have a war," Mr. Roosevelt will revisit Warm Springs at Thanksgiving. But all personal plans, all future projects, are subordinate to that "if." The same, in one degree or another, holds true for all of us.

There is speculation as to what the President meant by "we." Did he mean if the United States is itself engaged in hostilities, or merely if a major conflict is raging overseas? Those who have followed Mr. Roosevelt's thoughtful speeches on the conditions necessary for peace will understand his choice of a pronoun. By "we" he undoubtedly meant western civilization. A war affecting its foundations would immediately affect us vitally, whether or not the United States was at the outset physically involved.

But there was a greater value than its stimulus to national thinking in the President's passing remark on Easter afternoon. Until it has actually started another world war is not inevitable. It can still be averted if the free nations are willing to show that they will take a stand before it is too late.

Pressure from the Berlin-Rome axis will not ease until it reaches the point of serious resistance. Then only can a different and honestly conciliatory attitude be expected from the dictators. Nothing less than the show of preponderant force will stop them, for force is the only language which they understand. But, like less exalted bullies, force is to them a real deterrent.

In using the collective "we" the President told Hitler and Mussolini, far more impressively than he told Warm Springs, that the tremendous force of the United States must be a factor in their current thinking. He told the axis powers that the Administration is far from indifferent to their plottings. He made it plain that a war forced by them would from the outset involve the destinies of a nation which, as they fully realize, is potentially far stronger than Germany and Italy united.

To make that plain at this crucial time is to help in preventing war. To make the dictators realize that there is a limit to unresisted aggression is in itself to set that limit. It is on that incontrovertible reasoning that the French have stiffened their policy. It is on that reasoning that the British are laying down a deadline. It is on that reasoning, through the application of which peace can still be saved, that President Roosevelt properly links the United States with the eleventh-hour effort to avert a shattering disaster.

Senator Lewis

Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois was a man to whom both the past and the present contributed to form an unusually lovable character. His gallant and gracious manner, his Chesterfieldian bearing, the measured periods of his speech and his sparkling wit were all reminiscent of a day which the world has long since and unhappily left behind. With respect to such amenities he proudly belonged to the vanished past.

Yet James Hamilton Lewis could never be classified in the category of picturesque survivals. He had a superb awareness of the currents and cross-currents operating in the world of actuality. In his dealing with contemporary problems he combined wide learning with shrewd common sense. Beneath the veneer of his pleasant mannerisms there was oak of a firm and rugged grain.

A native of Virginia, he served in Congress on three separate occasions and from two widely separated States, a tribute to his political skill and his adaptability. For a time he was Democratic Congressman-at-Large from Washington. Later, having moved to Illinois, he was elected Senator from that State and served during the critical years of the World War. His retirement in 1919 proved only the prelude to a triumphant re-entry into politics with his election as Senator, again from Illinois, in 1931.

A man of charm and kindness, devoted to the interests of his State and to the Nation, the Senate, Washington and the United States are all the poorer for his passing.

Innocents Abroad

The Department of State recently made public some interesting figures compiled by the various consulates as to the number of Americans now residing in foreign lands. Not counting tourists, tennis champions, Rhodes scholars, traveling salesmen, Nobel Prize winners and other transients and quasi-transients, these expatriates on January 1 numbered only 350,797—or very slightly more than one-quarter of 1 per cent of our total population.

Of these more than half, or 175,687, are in Canada, which many Americans are unable to regard as alien soil. The Americans in the Dominion outnumber by two to one all the Americans residing in Europe, and by eleven to one all Americans residing in South America.

The total of Americans living in Europe is only 84,603. And of these the greatest single group is not, as might be supposed, in Great Britain or France, but in Italy. Indeed the number of American's resident in that country is more than double the number resident in France, even after counting the remnant of Left Bank literati.

Whether this curious disparity is due to the attractions of the Italian climate, the glory of the art and archeological treasures, the excellence of the wines, the much-advertised punctuality of trains, or merely to the disposition of many Italo-Americans to return in old age to their native soil, is difficult to discover. But whatever the reason it is apparently not political, for it does not apply to the other pole of the Axis. The Americans in Germany plus Austria are all told only 5,787. There are almost that many living in Portugal.

Despite all the posters and brochures of Intourist, Inc., and all the editorials in the New Masses, and all the summer cruises for serious young thinkers, no more than 400 Americans have found the Soviet Utopia attractive enough to stay there for any protracted time. And of these 400, most are probably technical experts of one kind and another.

Compared to the number of Germans known to be living in South America the State Department figures are a little disconcerting. Good Neighborliness has not yet reached the point of extensive visiting. In all that vast continent the total of resident Americans is only 15,772. There are almost that many in the West Indies. In Mexico and Central America there are 21,515 Americans. It will be observed that this is less than one-seventh the number in Canada.

In the absence of other data it is difficult to say how much these figures have been affected by recent political trends. But it would certainly seem that the well-nigh unanimous attitude of Americans toward the other parts of the world is that of the proverbial hinterlander toward New York: "All right, maybe, for a visit, but I wouldn't live there on a bet."

People are getting harder to please. The other night a man broke into a Kansas City residence, took a bath and left a note in which he complained of the quality of the soap.

A New Yorker on trial for passing counterfeit explained: "You see, Judge, I didn't have any other kind of money to spend."

Allowin' as how an old cowhand is sort of adverse tuh pass remarks about a teacher, that don't give her no license tuh go ridin' on thuh wrong trail. The Obvious Moral

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Thanks to our supine School Board and the doughty D. A. R., upward of 70,000 people were privileged on Sunday to enjoy the glorious exaltation of a Marian Anderson concert, whereas but a fraction of such a multitude could have heard the colored diva at Central High School or Constitution Hall.

Race, creed—all were forgotten under the spell of the singer's divine voice. It was a fitting finale to the Easter Sabbath—in a setting as sublime as the gifted singer's voice. The writer has been able to hear all the foremost singers of the present and previous decade—Eames, Nordica, Lehmann, Kirby-Lunn, Flagstad, Galli-Curci, Heink, etc., and today's evidence demonstrated beyond question that for range, control, purity and precision of tone, diction and emotional color, Marian Anderson is flawless.

It is to be hoped that the God-given voice of the singer will suffer no impairment by the ordeal of singing in the outdoors, with chill, damp winds from the Potomac so plentiful. And the rapt attention given her must surely have been gratifying to Miss Anderson, and what an argument for a municipal auditorium was this crowd of 70,000!

Appreciation

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The national commander has directed me to advise you of the sincere appreciation of every member of this association for your splendid demonstration of Americanism and belief in an adequate and efficient national defense program by the printing and distribution of "The Star-Spangled Banner" and the "Notes on 'The Star-Spangled Banner' and Francis Scott Key."

A well-rounded national defense program is far more than the procuring of modern instrumentalities of defense for the man behind the gun is an element of national defense second to none and of equal importance to modern equipment. It follows that a well-equipped, trained, treated and paid Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard are America's best guarantee of peace.

Concerning The Allies' Debts

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a letter published in The Post of April 9, a London correspondent makes an appeal, in the interest of greater friendship between our two peoples, for a consideration of the moral, as distinguished from the legal, side of the incidence of the British war debt to the United States.

As one who has devoted a lifetime to international law, I certainly most heartily agree that the moral side of the issues between nations should receive first consideration. But before any question can properly be considered, legally, morally, or otherwise, the facts must be known, and it appears from your correspondent's letter that the facts surrounding this debt are still improperly understood in England.

Mr. Finlason repeats statements that were made by Lord Balfour in 1920 to the effect that the American debt was incurred by England not for herself but for her allies. Mr. Finlason is probably not aware that this statement was officially denied by the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States at the time it was made.

In a memorandum handed to the British Ambassador in June, 1920, Mr. Mellon said: "The United States took the position that it would make advances to each government to cover the purchases made by that government and would not require any government to give obligations for advances made to cover the purchases of any other government. Thus the advances to the British government, evidenced by its obligations, were made to cover its own purchases, and advances were made to the other allies to cover their purchases."

Mr. Finlason also says that "not one penny piece was ever received in cash—the whole debt being incurred for armaments and goods supplied to England's foreign allies at a time when America was also an ally—England giving her guarantee." This excuse for England's failure to continue payments on the debt was also answered years ago.

In a letter to Senator Borah, dated September 12, 1922, Mr. Bernard M. Baruch pointed out that in addition to the money spent for the purchase of munitions, the money borrowed by England was spent for things that went into the making of shipping which became a permanent part of the mercantile fleet of England, or money that was used for the purchase of such material as went for commercial purposes or to bolster exchange to facilitate England's purchases in other countries. It was used, he adds, for the purchase in the United States of food for England's civilian population, which was sold by the British government to its people.

Finally, Mr. Finlason seems not to be aware of what went on at the Paris Peace Conference of 1919 in regard to this subject. Repeated attempts were made at that time to have the United States share in the cost of the entire war, not only for the period during which it was a belligerent, but in addition from the beginning of the war in 1914, on the theory that "the war was as much your war as our war" as intimated to the American delegation.

As one of the American Commissioners reported officially in 1920: "While the Allies have never bluntly so stated, their policy seems to be to make Germany indemnify them for having started the war and to make us indemnify them for not having entered the war sooner." M. Andre Tardieu, then a representative of France at the peace conference, stated the position of the Allies with perfect French logic:

"After unity in war, unity in peace. Could not sacrifices borne in common include, after the losses in lives and property, the costs of settlement—the richest helping the less rich to bear their share of the burden?" Needless to say, all such proposals were flatly rejected by the representatives of the United States at the Paris conference. Even after President Wilson returned to Washington, Mr. Lloyd George continued to press him on the subject by correspondence, but the President stood firm in his refusal to consider the cancellation of the debt, or its linking with the collection of reparations by the Allies from Germany.

Probably no American now has any hope that any part of the debt will ever be collected. Most of us even have no desire to collect it. It will stand, however, as a permanent object lesson of our first adventure in the armed conflicts of Europe.

It would be helpful to better understanding between the English and American peoples if information of this nature might be published in a London paper in return for the courtesy of the publication of Mr. Finlason's letter in The Washington Post.

In Defense Of Hitler

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been reading The Post for quite awhile now, and because I keep coming across condemnations of Hitler's aggressiveness and treaty-breaking I have been prompted to enter a word in his behalf.

When Germany laid down her arms on November 11, 1918, it was with the tacit understanding that the peace conference would be carried out on the basis of President Wilson's "fourteen points." However, the allies made many mental reservations, and when the Treaty of Versailles went into effect it was not what the Germans had expected. Even though they had agreed to the loss of Alsace-Lorraine, they were shorn of the Saar Valley, the Polish Corridor, Memel, and their colonies.

It was Germany, and Germany alone, who reduced her armaments to the quotas allowed, while the allies, contrary to all agreements, not only refused to reduce theirs, but even built them up. Germany was forced by the allies to pay reparations for the full cost of the war, yet the only way she could do this was to export to foreign countries and France and England, contrary to Wilson's ideal, put up economic barriers which effectively blocked the payment, which they still demanded.

For 15 years Germany waited for the allies to keep their agreements, but finally she gave up, and, with the ascent of Hitler in 1933, Germany began to regain her status in Europe which is top nation today. She is of necessity a great military power and she is looking for that which is rightfully hers, an "impartial adjustment of colonial claims" and the "self-determination" she was promised. People will say, "was the taking of Czecho-Slovakia in keeping with the policy of self-determination?" I will answer that when a player finds opposed to himself in a life struggle an adversary who cheats, he too, will use every power he possesses for his own preservation.

Just so Germany finds herself being enclosed in another ring of steel and she wishes to keep her back door open in the interests of self-preservation. Czecho-Slovakia was on the road to this back door and Britain practically forced Germany to take it by threats of another front-door blockade.

Opposes Pittman Bill

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The impracticability of the cash-and-carry policy makes the overhauling of neutrality laws imperative. Yet Chairman Pittman proposes the continuance of this policy in order to help England and France in time of war, while deliberately disregarding the existing war in the Far East. True, neutrality laws are passed to deal with future wars. But if they cannot cope satisfactorily with wars of today, how can they be expected to work in the future?

Americans are in a better position to understand the world situations than, perhaps, any other nation. They sympathize with the Chinese, but they help Japan conquer China by supplying her a major portion of war materials. Sympathy in this case, I am afraid, isn't even worth a Chinese penny. For, strange as it seems, Uncle Sam says, "I love you" to China, while passionately kissing Japan.

Americans are intelligent and charitable. They sweat in order to raise funds for China relief. They send doctors over there to bandage wounds inflicted by bombs made in the U. S. A. and to remove from dying women and children bullets come from America. If there is any intelligence in this, I refuse to see it. If there is any logic, it is certainly beyond the comprehension of my Oriental mind.

The Post Impressionist

One Easter Week

OLD MEN say there is one special day, perhaps one special hour, perhaps one fleeting moment, in every man's experience of a place that etches it in his waking memory forever. Thus, I have always thought of Dublin in terms of one Tuesday, and of that Tuesday perhaps in terms of its dawn, and of the dawn itself in terms of one moment, maybe, when first a deep orange flare crept into the pale sky and stole over it and remained there glaring and the barricaded streets and the cobblestones went a-glowing with the crimson of its fire.

Two days before, church bells had tolled that Christ had risen. The flare that Tuesday dawn proclaimed the fact that Ireland had risen. And yet not Ireland surely. Only a few dreamers with tired eyes and hearts heavy with waiting had sallied forth that Easter of '16 to give battle to an empire. "Ireland will not find Christ's peace until she has taken Christ's sword," the leader Pearse had written—Pearse, the romantic poet and literary dandy who wrote sentimental things in bad Gaelic about the small hedged fields of Ireland and the quiet peace of a sunny day.

Pearse would leave his beloved St. Enda's forever that morning to fulfill a legend that ran under a mural of Cuchulain in its dining hall—"I care not if my life has only the span of a day and a night, if only my deeds be spoken of by the men of Ireland."

By his side Jim Connolly—"the one real intellect of the rising"—would fight, but not for nationalism. For the republicanism of Connolly was not parochial. It was international. He had as much contempt for the Irish exploiter, masquerading as a nationalist, as he had for the hypocritical English patriot. He was a Marxist who already had tilted lances with privilege. "Thank God, Pearse, we have lived to see this day," he would say to the poet-dreamer as the red glare settled over the dawning city, its wide parks and beautiful mansions, its dark and narrow laneways and foul rookeries.

There was scant sympathy in Dublin for the dreamers. A crowd of gapers and a few puzzled policemen watched as the main contingent of rebels swung from Liberty Hall to capture the General Postoffice. They scattered when a party of His Majesty's outraged lancers rode down Sackville street at a gallop.

From behind newly barricaded windows a volley greeted the riders. Horses reared their forelegs in the air and two men crashed to the cobblestones. A tricolor suddenly appeared on the roof, but the only cheer was from within. At noon a tall man in uniform holding a paper in his hand appeared in the main doorway. Two other men came to stand beside him. For a moment the tall man stood there silently. Then he began to speak—"In the name of God and of Ireland's dead generations . . ." When he had finished an Irish Republic was in being.

But the citizens of the fledgling republic did not know the new order. Up from the innumerable alleys of the Coombe, up from the network of tumbledownery about the Broadstone and Inchichore, down the hundred twisting lanes about Sackville street streamed the unwashed underworld. Shawled, toothless hags leaned perilously out of dilapidated Georgian mansions to yell questions at street-walkers in Easter finery who raced by below. Men hurriedly lowered pints in dingy saloons, rushed out without paying and were joined by the sitters on stone steps and flea-bitten heads that had just emerged from sunless basements.

They all crowded in on Sackville street. In surprise and rage they jeered and screamed at the green-clad Volunteers who looked sheepishly back at them. "The dirty pro-Germans," the crowd roared and they began to sling uprooted paving stones at the barricades until warning shots from the sentries scattered them.

In a little while, however, they reassembled and then some Dublin boyway, recognizing certain advantages to a rebellion—even an Irish one—drove his heel through the window of a candy shop. The mob howled with glee at this new diversion. In a trice, the looting had begun.

But there was little glee within. Inside, everyone was high-strung, expectant. Plans had gone awry and the country had not risen. Old Tom Clarke, who had dreamed this dream for 17 years in a British dungeon and was now seeing it fulfilled, was all nerves and blaming everyone. Pearse, face to face with reality for the first time, mooned about like the melancholy Dane or chanted irrelevant verse about "sacrifice" and "redemption." Thomas MacDonagh, the voluble poet-teacher, was strangely silent. Perhaps he remembered his own admonition—"To us, as to the ancient Irish poets, the half-said thing is dearest."

Only Connolly was calm. Schooled in Marxian principles, the old Trades Union fighter was now eager to put the Commune's theories of street warfare into practice. Picks and shovels were put in willing hands. Tunnels were dug. Communications were established with other posts in the city's center, in the outer circle.

A young staff officer watched these preparations. On a few days before, that young officer had arrived from London. His name was Michael Collins. He was an unknown then and being an unknown would escape the death sentence that loomed for leaders. He would note the blunders made in this adventure and though he would not talk about them he would profit by them and then one day in the not-too-distant future he would avenge the execution of the dreamers and by methods not in accord with their absurd, attractive ideas of chivalry.

There was little fighting those first two days, though every now and again a roll of firing would be crested with single, short explosions. But Dublin merely laughed at the noise of its own bombardment and was gay in the sunlight. When Tuesday's dawn came with its red flares, however; when other nights passed into bleaker dawns that brought the tornado of big guns and flashing artillery and stabbing searchlights and bursting star-shells, then would Dublin weep in its Gethsemane amid the crumbling ruins.

Books And Things

By Lewis Gannett

Days Of A Dictator

"The Holy Terror" (Simon & Schuster, $2.75) is H. G. Wells' novel about an Englishman who became the first world dictator, and it is a compelling and provocative story in the good old Wells vein.

Mr. Wells has made his own dramatization of the world's fears, and set his own world hopes in the very soil of today's upheaval and menace. The inimitable Wells mastery of excitement, irony and lively zeal is in this story of a middle-class neurotic who subjugates the entire earth; never for one moment does its pregnant interest fail. This is a novel of 454 pages with no love story, no active women characters, little concentration of individual emotion or incident, and pages upon pages of utopian preachment and prophecy; and it not only carries these apparent disabilities easily, but turns them into wings to aid its swift sure flight. H. G. Wells is having a grand time with the tale of Rud, the master world director, and when H. G. Wells is having a grand time with a story (a condition which, of course, includes a burning seriousness) his readers find it difficult to lay the story down. "The Holy Terror" is a book that will be read with avidity and absorption.

Rud, naturally enough, starts out in life as a problem child. He is moody, resentful and uncontrolled. As a baby he goes into convulsions if he doesn't get what he wants. Later he throws a knife at the brother who teases him. He is undersized and ugly and unpopular and afraid; and he hits below the belt by instinct and without thought of restraint. But he dreams of some miraculous achievement of supremacy, as most children who feel inferior do; and to a quite ordinary temperament he adds what the wise family doctor calls a "certain excess of go." Suddenly, in college, he surprises himself and every one else by a burst of eloquence on the need for revolution. As his shrewdness guides him away from the instant acclaim that would be too quick and easy, his path is set toward adoration and leadership.

CHRISTENED RUDOLF (the family name is Whitlow), he rebels against "Rudie" and, with memories of a famous man called Rudyard, renames himself Rud. And when the 1920's and '30s have run their troubled course, and the embryo dictator and his supporters pull off their first great coup in London in 1941, "just Rud" is a fine handle for the crowd to catch hold of:

One, two; one, two, three.
Just Rud is the man for me.

Throughout his triumphant career he maintains the necessary paradox of the crowd's worship, a personality both accessible and mysterious.

But Rud the master director differs in one important respect from the dictator type we know. His conquest of world power is not much more than an extension, in itself. But he is a genuinely novel figure in that he is guided by world-spirited men, and becomes in his very despotism an instrument for the fulfillment of their altruistic dream. He is the center of a nuclear group of men who are sincere, ardent, brilliant, and genuinely interested in the future of humanity, not merely in success or glory for self, country or race. Rud has quick intelligence; he has "rare flashes of social and political insight"; his moments of inspiration are like an all-conquering mystical gift—and they are all-conquering. His followers recognize that unique force in him: he is their mouthpiece, their figurehead, as he is their great leader. Through him, and in him, they form their party to redress the world's wrongs: the Party of the Common Man.

"I am the common man," Rud says, and indeed he believes it.

Then in the "Brigand Forties" the world falls into its desperate "War of Ideologies," and in the resultant ruins of old nationalisms the Party of the Common Man forms its common-sense government for a common world state with "real common ownership." And Rud, eliminating a would-be man on horseback in swift counterattack, becomes supreme lord of the world as trustee for humanity.

EVEN INTO unrelieved discussion H. G. Wells can put the thrill and portentiousness of great events. And events, along with discussion, are plentiful here. Although he is humanity's instrument, Rud becomes a personal tyrant and goes the tyrant's way. Although he is a personal tyrant he is still humanity's instrument. The dictator—that "creature of unlimited, fear-haunted egotism"—passes. The perfected Wellsian order of the world, with security and freedom for every man, survives. Of course we may not be able to follow in the steps of this Wellsian optimism. We may not want to. We may even note that the brave new world of H. G. Wells' dream bears some haunting resemblence to that of Aldous Huxley's nightmare. (Every person, place and thing in the novel is fictitious, says Mr. Wells, "even the countries in" which it happens.") We may find something faintly but irresistibly mirthful in the complacent assumption of happy world unity under a panmondial administration entirely composed of English and American men. But these are small matters. They do not lessen the novel's disturbing fascination.

For this is the story of a dictator in his time: his mind and character, his rise to power, his despotism, apotheosis, defeat in triumph; his end at last. As such, the novel is grimly enthralling. It swings our minds through the author's brilliant parable and theory to the contemplation of our actual world. If this be prophecy, we may make the most of it.

Life's Darkest Moment

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Solid Ground Of Constitutional Principle

AS WE listen to the arguments on the neutrality act before the committee of the two houses of Congress, we should bear in mind exactly what is the question with which Congress has to deal.

We shall find that in the law, as it now stands, only the first two sections need to be considered. The first section prohibits the export of "arms, ammunition, and implements of war" as soon as the President "finds" and "proclaims" that "there exists a state of war" abroad. Under this section it is now lawful for American manufacturers to make contracts to sell airplanes to Britain and France and Holland. But if these nations are attacked by Germany, Italy or Japan, the planes may not be delivered.

The second section permits the President to forbid American ships to carry food and raw materials to nations that are at war and it permits him to forbid American producers to sell these things on credit. But this section expires on May 1. Therefore, if a world war breaks out, it will be lawful for American ships to carry all supplies, except "arms, ammunition and implements of war," into the war zones. The fact that this section expires on May 1 means that thereafter it will be lawful for private firms to ship supplies into the war zone, and that the United States Government will have to decide how much diplomatic protection it will give them if American ships are attacked by submarines and airplanes.

Thus Section 1, which does not expire, denies to France and England and the Netherlands the right to buy with cash and carry away in their own ships weapons with which to defend themselves. But Section 2, when it expires on May 1, makes it lawful for American firms and American shipowners to challenge the submarines, and compels the government either to enforce their lawful rights or to refuse to protect their lawful rights.

Dangerous Muddle Seen After May 1

AFTER MAY 1, therefore, our laws will be in a dangerous muddle. On the one hand, the United States will be unable to sell weapons to nations which may be the victims of brutal aggression. On the other hand, the American businessman will be able in order to earn his profits, to challenge individually the submarines and airplanes of the aggressor powers. Under Section 1 we shall be refusing weapons to the nations that are defending themselves. But under Section 2, when it has expired, American cotton, copper and oil producers will be engaged in a private struggle with the Rome-Berlin axis, and some may also be engaged in an attempt to run the British blockade.

No one, whatever his other views, can regard this situation as anything but a combination of the worst features of all possible policies. It has none of the virtues of consistent isolation. It has none of the virtues of consistent support of the pacific nations. It simply makes the American government helpless to prevent war and yet entangled in the risks of war. The Senators, who are hinting that they will prevent any action on the law, are, therefore, proposing to create a situation which will suit them as little as it suits their opponents.

If there is no further legislation, Mr. Nye will find that his law is half-dead; that what remains of his law injures desperately the democracies with which at heart he must sympathize, while it fails completly to keep Americans out of contact with trouble. Though he is a democrat, he will have struck what might be a deadly blow at the democracies; though he is an American isolationist, he will have failed to isolate America from the war zones.

Stresses Necessity For Clear Thinking

IT IS, therefore, necessary to straighten out the legal muddle which will exist when section 2 expires on May 1. The question is how this can best be done. In answering this question in order that we may clarify the existing muddle, it is necessary to think clearly lest we produce another muddle.

Last week, in the discussion before the Senate committee, there seemed to be an impression that Congress can and that Congress should now determine by legislation the foreign policy of the United States. Curiously enough the two extreme positions are based on the same assumption. The one, that of men like Messrs. Nye, Borah, Clark, supposes that Congress can, by legislating an embargo, legislate against intervention in a European war. The other extreme position is that Congress should delegate to the President the right to name "the aggressor" and in effect to go to war with him.

The two positions are equally unsound and equally at variance with the spirit and the practice of the American Constitution. Mr. Nye seeks to deprive the President of his indubitable constitutional authority, his authority to be, as Marshall put it in 1800, "the sole organ of the Nation in its external relations, and its sole representative with foreign nations." The other position, that of Mr. Stimson, would in fact delegate to the President the indubitable authority of Congress to make declarations of war. For it is not to be denied that the power to name an aggressor and to seek to injure him is war, though it be described as something short of war.

Adherence Urged To Power Division

THE SOUND position, it seems to me, is to adhere to the division of powers which has existed since the foundation of the Republic. It will be safest to assume that a system which has been tested by the experience of a hundred and forty years is likely to serve the interest of the United States better than something which can now be invented by men who are under the influence of the emotions and the sympathies and the fears of a world crisis. I should suppose that Mr. Borah, who is above all other things a constitutionalist, would see that precisely now, when things are so dangerous and so obscure, it is the part of wisdom to stan firmly on the clear principles of the Constitution.

Those principles are, as regards the powers of the President, clearly defined in the opinion of the Supreme Court, written by Mr. Justice Sutherland and handed down on December 21, 1936, in the so-called Chaco case. The court reaffirmed here what the court itself, all the Presidents since Washington, and Congress repeatedly until very recently, have always held—that the President is "the sole organ of the Federal Government in the field of foreign relations" and that "the interference of the Senate in the direction of foreign negotiations" is "calculated to diminish that responsibility and thereby to impair the best security for the national safety." Following that doctrine, Congress has from the very beginning, as early as the act of June 4, 1794, authorized the President to regulate commerce during war, but it has never trespassed on his authority by mandatory legislation.

The principle of the Constitution is equally clear as regards the powers of Congress. Only Congress has the power formally to declare war, that is to say to name the aggressor. And only Congress has the right to raise armies for the prosecution of a war.

Two Principles Held Best Available

THESE TWO principles are the best principles available, and we should not desert them now under the influence of our immediate feelings. They have been tested by experience and almost certainly they are more reliable than anything which can suddenly be improvised.

If we do adhere to them, we shall restore to the President his authority under the Constitution to regulate foreign commerce in time of war, subject to international law. That would mean the repeal of the first two sections of the so-called neutrality statute. This would leave in existence, of course, the Government control of the export of munitions and the Johnson act forbidding loans to defaulting governments. Both of these measures are domestic legislation and well within the letter and spirit of the Constitution.

Having repealed those portions of the neutrality act which deprive the President of his time-honored constitutional powers, we should refuse to delegate to the President the right to name the aggressor, and so to declare war. That authority belongs to Congress, and should be jealously retained by Congress.

HAVING returned to our own fundamental principles in these matters, we shall have some kind of solid ground to stand on, something better than the shifting sands of popular emotion blown about by the winds of propaganda. For the principles of the Constitution define the division of power, fix the limits of authority, and, if they are enforced by public opinion on the President and the Congress alike, they will give to each the necessary authority and the clear responsibility.

Baruch's War Theory Right

By Mark Sullivan

No Law Can Do It

THE SENATE Committee on Foreign Relations is trying to devise a neutrality law that will keep America out of war. Of all the words that have come from the mouths of well-meaning Senators, or from the distinguished witnesses they have called before them, none was truer than the bit of slang quoted by the wise and experienced Bernard M. Baruch: "There ain't no such animal."

The Senate committee can devise a law that is appropriate to the conditions. They can, as Mr. Baruch and others pointed out, devise a law that may somewhat reduce the chance of our being involved in war. But they cannot devise a law that will, with absolute certainty, keep us out of war.

No law can do it. No aspiration on the part of the people can do it. No policy of Congress can do it. The lesson America most needs to take to heart, in the face of existing conditions, is just this: No matter how much we may intend to keep out of war, there can be no absolute certainty that we will. By all means let us have the intention; by all means let us act as intelligently as we know how, to reduce the chance of our going to war. But let us not deceive ourselves.

Never have we needed so much to know the lessons of history. And no lesson of history is so applicable now as the undependability, for keeping us out of war, of words and slogans and formulas and laws.

Wilson Admonished Both Americas

AFTER THE GREAT war broke out, President Wilson admonished America—each American individually in his own heart—to preserve neutrality, be "impartial in thought as well as in action." Practically all of us applauded Wilson's aspiration and shared it. But that aspiration proved vain; that formula did not work.

Later, in 1916, President Wilson ran for re-election, mainly on a slogan devised by his party managers, "He Kept Us Out of War." Most of us assumed that because Wilson had kept us out of war thus far, he would continue to keep us out—for we tend to believe what we wish to believe. But neither the President's intention, nor the people's hope, were able to keep us out. Exactly five months after Wilson was re-elected on that slogan, America was in the war.

We were not able to keep out of the Great War for the simple reason that the time came when we wanted to go in. "We" means practically all America, America as an aggregation of individuals. It was the sum of our individual emotions that took us into war.

Before those emotions arise we can make what resolutions we will, pass what laws our statesmen devise. We can tie the hands of President and Congress, as is proposed by some of the measures now put forward. But we cannot tie the hands of ourselves as an aggregate of individuals. Or, if we do tie them, we will break the bonds if and when emotion overcomes us. America went into the Great War because the individual emotions of the American people as a mass wanted to go in.

We have been told it was the bankers who took us into the Great War. And so, in the neutrality law we passed two years ago, we tied the hands of the bankers. We made it a crime for any American to loan money to a nation at war or buy its bonds, under penalty of five years in jail, or $50,000 fine. That statute may have some measure of wisdom, but it will not keep us out of war.

Munitions Makers Were Blameless

LIKEWISE, we have been told it was the munitions makers who took us into the war, so we have a provision against that. No American may sell munitions to a nation at war under penalty of five years' imprisonment or $10,000 fine. But that law will not keep us out of war. Actually it will put upon us a handicap, if and when we go to war, for we will have deprived ourselves of the advantage of having our munitions factories at work and equipped to turn out great quantities of arms for our own use.

To this question, why America went to war, the best answer was given by the man best equipped to know, Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War during the Wilson Administration. The bankers and munitions makers, Mr. Baker said, had not the slightest effect." The American people, Mr. Baker said, went to war because they were cumulatively angered by actions of Germany, especially the sinking of unarmed ships. When the Lusitania was torpedoed, Mr. Baker said, "the shock of this disaster . . . literally overwhelmed America and public opinion never recovered from it."

And Mr. Baker concluded with a warning for the future—future at the time Mr. Baker wrote, but now the present: "The lessons of history indicate that in any future similar situation, it will be similarly difficult to induce our people to keep from seeking such relief when they begin to suffer too cruelly as the result of wars in which they have no part."

Axis Strategy

By Barnet Nover

The Dictators Wage Preventive War

THE ALL-IMPORTANT fact in Europe today is that both sides are now acting on the assumption that war is inevitable and may not long be delayed.

This does not mean that the governments in London and Paris, in Berlin and Rome are yet fully convinced that peace, or what goes for peace these days, can no longer be preserved. It does not. The democracies still hope to avert war, even at this eleventh hour, by mobilizing against the Fascist nations so formidable an aggregation of military, financial and economic power as to make them think twice before plunging Europe into a general conflict.

The axis powers, on the other hand, hope to avert large-scale hostilities by waging preventive war against nations incapable of putting up any kind of real resistance. In that way the formation of an antitotalitarian bloc might be prevented. In that way, too, the alliance which the European democracies have already formed or may form could be neutralized.

IT IS ENORMOUSLY significant, however, that neither side would act any differently if the statesmen were fully convinced that war is inevitable. In other words, the strategy which Hitler and Mussolini are and have been employing fully takes into account the possibility and even the probability of war even as does the far less effective strategy which Chamberlain and Daladier, with increasing vigor, are pursuing.

It has been said, and with reason, that the alliance made by Great Britain with Poland the other day marked a revolutionary departure in British policy. Hitherto Great Britain has carefully refrained from offering any East European nation any specific pledge of future support. She is doing so now.

Yet the fact must not be forgotten that Britain's distaste of alliances has been limited to periods between wars. The only British alliance which has ever survived wars which Britain has waged is that with Portugal which dates back to the seventeenth century. In war-time, however, Great Britain has never hesitated to make alliance with any and every nation willing to join her in fighting a common enemy.

Thus it is that, in one war or another, Great Britain has been allied to Prussia, France, Austria-Hungary, Turkey, the Netherlands, Belgium, Serbia, Greece, Spain and Italy.

War Strategy A Real Factor

THE ALLIANCE with Poland, therefore, and the prospective alliances with Rumania, Turkey and other nations of eastern and southeastern Europe, while based on the hope that they may stop Hitler and Mussolini in their tracks is also predicated on the possibility that if war does nevertheless break out these nations will help defeat the totalitarian powers. In a real sense, therefore, the British leaders are assuming that the war which they fear is already on, even though the guns have not yet gone off.

That, to an even greater degree, is the assumption behind German and Italian policy today. Sooner or later, the dictators feel, they will have to reckon with Great Britain and France. German domination of that vast region between the Rhine and the Dniester would always be precarious so long as Great Britain and France remained powerful.

The Italian dreams of an ever-expanding empire would also be touched with nightmarish doubts so long as that empire remained at the mercy of British sea power. Mussolini is perfectly aware of the fact that of the great empires of today, all but one live to a greater or lesser degree under the sheltering wing of the British fleet. This is true of the French, the Dutch, and the Portuguese empires, and, of course, of the British. He must either destroy the British Empire or become powerful enough to dominate it.

IT IS WAR STRATEGY, rather than economic motives, which dominates the actions of the dictators. There was no economic factor involved in the Italian attack on Albania. There was no immediate economic value to Hitler in the annexation of Bohemia and Moravia or the annexation of Memel. On the contrary, these moves have only heightened the already serious economic difficulties of Italy and Germany.

But the annexation of Bohemia and Moravia did have a direct and immediate value to the Third Reich when measured in terms of strategy and war potential. Not only did she get the Czech gold reserve but also the airplanes, the tanks, the machine guns, the amunitions plants of the destroyed republic. And with Czecho-Solvakia in her hands, Germany can put added pressure on Poland. The addition of Albania equally means an economic liability rather than an economic asset to Italy. But it does have at least some strategic value to the Fascist kingdom.

Chamberlain's Eyes Are at Last Open

IT IS NOT surprising, therefore, that the Albanian developments have had in Great Britain no less serious repercussions than the destruction of Czecho-Slovakia. Coupled with the reports that more Italian troops are pouring into Spain and that German planes have been sent to Tripoli, it suggests that when the small fry have been caught into the Berlin-Rome net the dictators will go after bigger game. That means, sooner or later, an attack on Great Britain and France or their subjugation without war to the status of second class powers.

Mr. Chamberlain's eyes have at last been opened. Fourteen months ago he revealed to Parliament his dream of a four-power combination which would insure peace in Europe for a generation. He declared his belief in the good faith of Mussolini as later, he declared his belief in the good faith of Hitler. He has had a frightfully expensive education in the realities. The dream is over. This awakening is a frenzied nightmare of last minute efforts whose ultimate success, so far as the preservation of peace is concerned, is by no means assured.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

A Letter From Wilhelm to Adolf

Doorn, April 10.

Dear Adolf:

Ach du lieber. Can you really mean it? Even if you can you mustn't. Take it from a fellow who tried it. You remember the name, don't you? Wilhelm. Wilhelm Hohenzollern. I used to be in the war-lord business back home, behaving something like you are now, although I don't think I was ever quite so obstreperous and noisy. I once sat where you sit now. And I would be sitting there now, happy, respected and intact, if I hadn't made just the mistake you seem to be about to make.

I was right up there where you are, thumping the tables, brushing off my uniforms, striking defiant attitudes and telling the rest of the world to go take a jump in the lake. In fact, every time I listen to one of your speeches I could swear you were using one of my old ones.

I had fighting legions, a big fleet, airplanes, money power and great military leaders, and I was sure I could lick everybody in the house with one hand tied behind me and with a sack pulled down over my eyes. It was "Deutschland Uber Alles!" and "Might makes right!" I thought of the British army as "contemptible" and of the French as a decadent people. And as for America—pfui!

I wouldn't take any back talk from anybody. Warnings went in one ear and out the other. British threats I thought laughable. Germany had the best trained fighting force in Europe and had no equal. That's what I thought. And that's what you think. I was going to have the war all over in a few months and take Christmas dinner in Paris. (Remember that crack?) How I hate to recall it! It short, Germany was monarch of all she surveyed. (But, Adolf, she should never take up surveying.)

It was "Hoch der Kaiser!" then just as it is "Heil, Fuehrer!" today. The only difference between you and me is that I had no microphone and trimmed my mustache in a different way. Well, there I was out to lick the world, put Germany on top of the earth and be head man of the European show, and what happened? All I know is that everything suddenly went black. The next thing I knew I was in small time vaudeville playing a 20-year engagement in a terrible skit called "The Wood Chopper of Doorn," or "He Didn't Know It Was Loaded."

Think of it! I have had 20 years to do nothing but think over my one big mistake. How would you like 20 years to think over a big mistake? No? Well, I'll [illegible] for ten, then. But don't be fooled. Don't think war is a picnic. Look before you leap, Adolf, and remember war is not a ski jump, although in my case it turned out to be something of the sort, at that.

Yours sincerely.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Superior Girl, 25, Desperately Eager to Marry, Has Two Suitors; Which Should She Accept?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have just received a letter from a girl aged 25, a very good friend of mine, asking for my advice on a matter of great importance to her. For several years we have confided in, and advised, each other, but I am afraid this problem is a little beyond my depth. I know for a fact that she takes my suggestions quite seriously and I don't want to make any mistakes. I am hoping you will help me to frame a sound reply.

This girl was reared in a small community, is well educated and was graduated from college as an honor student as well as president of her class. At present, she is working as clerk in a pharmacy. She is considered nice looking, and has high ideals, morals and ambitions. Although not old in the accepted sense of the word, she feels—as many women do—that time is slipping by all too rapidly and she wants to get married and start a home of her own.

However, she has not found the man that suits her and she is beginning to wonder if she ever will. Her problem, at present, is this: She is dating two boys, on alternate nights, and neither knows about the other. Each thinks he is the No. 1 man in her life and both love her dearly. One is a college graduate, does everything in the correct manner, has excellent habits, comes from a good family and has a good job—but she finds him uninteresting, unsociable AND she does not love him. She merely respects him and wants to know if respect can lead to love.

As for the other fellow, she feels that she really loves him and that she is really happy when with him. As she puts it, this fellow "has golden opportunities and has the money to go to college, but is willing to give that up for her." BUT he lacks four months of finishing high school. She does not say how old he is, but I think she must be his senior by at least five years. I wish I could tell you more about him, but that is all the information she has given me.

So you see, there are two boys in love with her, but only one (so far as I can judge) in a position to marry her. Unfortunately, she doesn't love that one. What should I tell her? Should she forget them both? Or should she try to learn to love the college graduate? Frankly, I am at a complete loss in the matter. I realize what I have told you is somewhat sketchy, but that is all I know about it. The girl is becoming cynical and has almost reached the point of despair. Since she has turned to me for advice, I can't help feeling some responsibility, particularly since she will probably follow my (in this case, your) advice. Sincerely yours,

R. L. S.

"Stop" and "Go" Signals

DEAR R. L. S.: The chances are 100 to 1 that the girl would become a thousand-fold more cynical and despairing (outward symptoms of inner frustration) if she were to marry the man she doesn't love—and whom she cannot bring herself to love, despite his fine and fancy credentials. To be "in love with" another is to entertain an irrepressible conviction of psychic, temperamental and physical rapport with that person. Obviously, it is a feeling that cannot be consciously induced.

Where it exists, it is nature's whisper that the situation holds fruitful possibilities for biological and social (or shall we say, personality?) fulfillment. It is a sort of "Go" signal. Where it doesn't exist—where one person or the other is dismally devoid of that spontaneous stimulus and reassurance—it is nature's "Stop" warning, which the individual will do well to heed. Therefore, I think this girl should be advised to strike Suitor No. 1 completely off her list of supposed matrimonial prospects. Far from being a potential medium of emotional salvation for her, marriage to him would probably develop a situation of complete frustration. She would probably become a frigid wife, who would visit as much pointless suffering upon her husband as she had invoked upon herself.

With regard to the alternate candidate, you are right in saying that it is virtually impossible to form an opinion, when so little pertinent information has been supplied. Yet this very omission implies that the bare facts, if starkly submitted, would argue the absurdity of marriage in that quarter. It is logical to assume that the boy, as a senior in his last semester at high school, is less than 20 years old; maybe as young as 17; perhaps a year or two older. His devotion to the girl may be something in the nature of an adolescent infatuation—and she may suspect as much.

Her love for him may be the genuine article, yet if she has superior intelligence and common sense (which her scholastic record would indicate), she must know in her own heart that she would be taking advantage of an impetuous innocent in accepting his headlong offer of marriage. She ought to realize, moreover, that before they could be intellectually compatible mates—an absolute essential when there is marked disparity in ages; and an important article of marriage for any college-trained woman of able and cultivated mind—he would need educational opportunities (of academic and socially developing kind) that are comparable to hers.

Their chances of happiness in marriage today are considerably less than they might be five years from now, by which time the boy should have become a more seasoned and self-sufficing individual. If neither he nor she is willing to look that far ahead, and to contain their love in patience while he takes the difference between boyhood and manhood in his stride, I think one may say they are being foolhardy in the extreme.

If they are obstinately convinced of the permanency of their attachment, I suggest that they commit themselves to a long-term, tentative engagement for the next few years. During that time, the boy should work toward a college education or its equivalent in vocational training, and test his devotion to the girl against the measuring stick which will be provided by social contacts in a broader field than his native hamlet. Meanwhile, the girl should pull herself up by her bootstraps from her small-town environment and investigate what life has to offer her—in the way of comparable tests and challenges—in a metropolitan setting. Let them rest the matter on the lap of the gods until the time is ripe for rational consideration of marriage.

It is absurd for a woman to become panicky, cynical or despairing because she hasn't married herself off by the age of 25. Usually, the girl who misses marriage early doesn't marry until definitely mature—say around 30. And the marriage she makes at the latter age is often more suitable than the one she would have been delighted to embrace 10 years earlier. So tell your girl friend to take her man hunt a little easier; and not to get so desperate as to miss her aim or to drag home the wrong quarry.

Be Clannish in Topcoat Selection

"I'll take a large Scotch," won't necessitate an accompanying soda this spring. Such heathery-smelling plaids have been imported from bonnie Scotland lately that you'll be putting your Scotch on your back — and think how much better you'll feel the morning after. Washington shops have gone quite clannish over their versatile selections of heather-and-dell plaids.

The bonnie lass, above left, wears one of the newest and most lively of the cashmere tartans. Here are two views of this remarkable topcoat. It has a Peter Pan collar, and its loose sleeves, shoestring belt, and a full skirt, flaring into a fish-tail train in the back, make it both graceful and practical. It can be worn with a rakish feather-trimmed country felt over bracken and lea. With the wee skull cap of straw, above, it goes cityfied. Hunting—McLean is the plaid pictured, but King George, Leslie and Fraser are tartans also made in this model. Picturesque suits come in matching clan's plaids

Your Figure, Madame!

Martha Raye Type of Girl Should Beware Reducing Too Much; With Large Frame More Weight Is Necessary for Health

IT IS reported that Martha Raye fell over in a faint at a recent preview, that she had been trying to get her measurements down to glamour girl proportions and the diet was too drastic.

Well, to begin with, Miss Raye is no glamour girl—she is too good a comedienne for that! And, in the second place, she is a big girl with a frame that was never intended for ultra-streamlined weight.

Don't Go Too Far

Normal, healthy weight for this actress should be around 135 pounds. Of course, with the camera exaggerating size the way it does, that would be out of the question in the movies. But she should never attempt to weigh less than 125 pounds.

If you have have a large frame, let this be a reminder to you not to try to weigh too little. Minimum weight for you is 110 pounds for the first five feet of height, with an additional five and one-half pounds for each inch by which your weight exceeds the first five feet. Furthermore, with a very large frame, an extra 10 per cent may be added and your weight will still be within normal.

You large-framed girls not only look gaunt at the weight considered desirable for the small frame, but you also look older. Your energy is depleted and you lack exuberant vitality. You feel older, too!

Vitality Is Valuable

As a rule, what you have that other women envy is a high vitality and the terrific drive that goes with it. You would be foolish to adopt any measure which endangers this wealth of energy. If you are really overweight and need to reduce don't forget that your large frame entitles you to a high calorie allowance normally and that your reducing calories should be in proportion.

If you normally require 2,500 calories per day, your reducing allowance will be around 1,700. This may seem high in comparison with some of the half-pint diets, but it is no more than adequate for the girl of five feet and over, with the large frame. You can arrive at the exact number of calories you need for reducing by multiplying the number of pounds comprising your normal weight by the activity integer 16, and then taking two-thirds of the result as your reducing calorie allowance.

Stream Lining Exercise Needed

Most large women have superb postures but even this type has its special figure problem. There is a tendency to develop breadth through the midsection, particularly the hips, and to take on excess flesh through the shoulders and on the backs of the upper arms. Exercise is a necessary measure if you are to have a well-proportioned figure

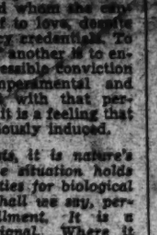
A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

Beatrice Lillie Appalled by Son's Mustache

New York, April 10.

WHAT A MEETING that was between Lady Peel (Beatrice Lillie to you and me) and her big son, the present Sir Robert Peel, the other day!



ALICE HUGHES

I wish you could have been with me when the Aquitania came in!

Auntie Bea, as you probably know, is starring this year in the Noel Coward show, "Set to Music." She's probably the greatest comedienne on the English speaking stage, and has been so recognized since she first came to our shores in the first "Charlot's Revue"—with Gertie Lawrence, too.

So when her "little boy" came in the other day there was a great to-do on the pier. And when Miss Lillie saw her son, the baronet, she very nearly had a severe attack of leaping fantods. Now nearing 18, Sir Bobby had shot up suddenly, as some adolescents do—and here he was towering 6 feet 2 into the stratosphere! Why, his mama had to climb up a companionway to give him a motherly kiss!

But his height wasn't a patch on the commotion caused by his budding mustache. That nearly bowled Auntie Bea over. "Son," she said in a reporter's hearing, "I want to talk to you as a mother. We are going over to the apartment, and off comes that thing! What do you think I am—an old woman?"

Which Lady Peel, pet of two continents, certainly isn't. But speaking strictly as a mother, she was going to have no part of that mustache on her big son. By now it is undoubtedly but a wispy memory. When Sir Bob gets back to Harrow, he can probably start another one. But his lady mother certainly doesn't care for the idea. It was as cute and human a reunion as I've ever known.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN: I hear that all is not well with the boy-and-girl romance of Diana Blythe, John Barrymore's debutante daughter, and "Tony" Drexel Duke, scion of the Drexels and the Biddles of Philadelphia. He's a student at Princeton, and considered the top catch of this season, while Diana is sporting one of the handsomest sun-tans ever developed in Florida. But if it's really love, kids—well, it will probably find a way!

John Barrymore's Daughter Said to Have Love Trouble

Now the law has cracked down on another famous New York institution, the sandwich man—who carries cards advertising practically anything in town. The poor old fellows only get a pittance for their weary rounds and now it appears that they won't get that, or pity either. But I remember attempts to suppress our beloved hurdy-gurdies—and quite a few of them still roam the town, grinding out "East Side, West Side" and "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling." So maybe the poor old sandwich men will survive, too.

Maple Sirup Adds Zestful Flavor

By Martha Ellyn,
The Post Food Editor.

MAPLE SIRUP need not be limited in its use to pancakes, waffles, French toast, hot biscuits and like fare. Many foods are improved by its flavor.

One dessert which is especially improved by its use as an ingredient is maple rice pudding. It is as simple as it is delicious.

Maple Rice Pudding

Combine and blend thoroughly 2½ cups boiled rice which has been drained, 2½ cups milk, 3 beaten eggs, 1 cup maple sirup, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon nutmeg, 1 cup raisins. Place in a buttered baking dish and bake at 350 degrees for 35 minutes or until the custard is firm. This dessert may be served either hot or cold, accompanied by cream. Serves eight.

Maple custard is another dessert with a distinct flavor. Beat four egg yolks and add ¾ cup maple sirup. Add 3 cups milk. Whip 4 egg whites together with ½ teaspoon salt. Fold the custard into the egg whites. Fill custard cups, place in pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven, 325 degrees, until firm.

Many Movie Heroes Wearers of Toupees

Many a movie hero adored by millions of fans is masquerading under a false wig, according to John T. Winterich, who exposes Hollywood as "the toupee capital of the world" in the April issue of the American Mercury. Mr. Winterich declares that nearly half of America's bald men wear some sort of artificial scalp cover. The best toupees, he says, are so skillfully fashioned that not even rival perruquiers can detect them on casual inspection.

Mrs. DeGoofey Tackles Conventions

WOMEN'S conventions are now to benefit from the reform zeal of Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, founder and president of the Do Something About It League.

Mrs. De Goofey

"With the spring convention season getting under way, I feel that something must be done immediately about the aberrations of femininity en masse," said Mrs. DeGoofey yesterday at her weekly press conference.

"Do you mean to insinuate, Mrs. DeGoofey," asked a reporter, "that women taken in the large—beg pardon, in groups—are not as—er—mentally responsible as women taken singly?"

"Exactly! And the same is true to an even greater extent of men. Take Congress——"

"Oh, by the way, Mrs. DeGoofey," interrupted a political correspondent, "have you anything to say in reply to Senator Tweet's charge that you are an old fool?"

"Well, as a matter of fact," rejoined Mrs. DeGoofey, "I am perfectly willing to admit that I am a fool—though not an old one. I would never get anything done—certainly I would never undertake anything—if I were not somewhat of a fool. But where I differ from most other fools is that I am thoroughly aware of my condition. And that, may I say, is where I have one great advantage over Senator Tweet."

Cascades of Corsages On All Bosoms

"In your convention reforms, Mrs. DeGoofey," inquired a girl reporter, "will you do anything about the corsages?"

"Yes, indeed! I shall make them more general. 'Six corsages for every delegate' is my motto."

"Who will furnish the corsages, Mrs. DeGoofey?"

"The husbands of the delegates. It should certainly be worth that much to any man to have his wife go—I mean enjoy—a nice little vacation in Washington."

"Have you any more practical reforms in view for women's conventions?" asked a man reporter.

"Yes, I hope to expedite the business meetings by insisting that every delegate either pass an intelligence test in advance or come equipped with ear trumpet and interpreter so that she will not waste time by asking that motions be repeated and perfectly obvious things explained.

'Amateur Night' Replaces Reports

"Then I shall establish lost-and-found bureaus, also appointment desks, so that no time will be consumed before the microphone announcing that Mrs. A has lost a pink glove, or that Mrs. B wants Mrs. C to meet her in the Byzantine Lounge. Also I shall abolish all reports of chapter delegates."

"But, Mrs. DeGoofey," protested a woman reporter, "won't the delegates be disappointed if they do not get to appear before the convention?"

"Let them do some parlor juggling, or acrobatics, or a buck and wing—well, anything that is entertaining. Also, I am going to limit the number of honor guests who may be introduced and applauded at luncheons and banquets to 25. And then I am going to do something drastic to prevent plate snatching by waiters. At most of the convention dining events I have attended I have had to hold on to my plate with one hand and eat with the other and, like a cat at a stolen bottle of cream, keep watch constantly over both shoulders. I am now working on a device whereby you can attach your plate to the table with a Yale lock and be assured that it will not be grabbed before you have finished the last crumb of your chicken and mushroom pattie."

"What about the convention entertainment, Mrs. DeGoofey?"

Blind Dates For Delegates

"Ah, that is the most important thing of all! Now, get this, everybody—I am going to establish a dating bureau in connection with every woman's convention in Washington!"

"For the pages, Mrs. DeGoofey?"

"No, indeed! For the delegates! I am tired of men having all the fun at conventions. So I am going to see that the women delegates get around a little."

"But, Mrs. DeGoofey—er—where will you get the men?"

"Oh, I am sure plenty of attractive bachelors, widowers and college boys can easily be rounded up. You see, these women are all outstanding, representative, influential, important——"

"Pardon a personal question, Mrs. DeGoofey," ventured a man reporter, "but will you yourself register with the dating bureau?"

"We—ll, of course," replied Mrs. DeGoofey, coyly, "you see . . . well, what I mean is . . . well, after all, of course . . . well, it is spring."

Costume Jewels Sing Gay Spring Jingle of Colors

New York, (AP).—The spring song of color sounds a bright refrain in costume jewels.

Shimmering seashells, bubble pearls big as marbles, glass flowers and "Gypsy rings," all have been tinted the season's new hues to make as colorful a heap of baubles as fashion has evolved. It glows with such shades as powdery pastel blues and deep ones, shell pink, cyclamen, chartreuse, yellow and sea blue-green.

The seashells make one of the gayest jingles in the costume jewel song. Tiny snail shells are strung in colored ropes (sea-green, sea-blue and violet), and several are twisted together to make necklaces. Synthetic tortoise shell plaques form chokers, and delicate shell flowers make new spring buttonnieres.

Pockets for Evening

Hollywood, Calif., April 9.—Ann Sheridan, movie actress, proves that even glamour girls like costume conveniences—all her new evening gowns are designed with pockets. The idea struck her after wearing a peach satin gown, in which Orry-Kelly had styled side seam pockets outlined with jewels and sequins, in "Naughty but Nice."

Early American Glassware Is Easy to Own says "Mary Annette," Decorating Hostess of The Hecht Co.

True, these aren't heirlooms, pictured here, but one might justly say the only difference between them and museum pieces is the date of their production. These are mouth-blown glasses, faithfully duplicating the rich coloring of collectors' pieces. The beer mug (which might be used for flowers, too) is a deep amethyst shade . . . and costs only $1. The quaint Camphor Jug, known to all collectors of American glass, has been faithfully duplicated in dark amber, and costs but 2.50. The Jenny Lind bottle, made so famous by the Fisherville Glass Works in the nineteenth century, to celebrate the visit of the Swedish Nightingale, has been duplicated in a deep, deep blue. These are just a few that can be used to lend vivid spots of color to your dining room or living room . . . looking especially lovely if placed where the light can shine through them.

Mr. and Mrs. Edge Give Party For Debutante Miss Dillingham

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

CLIMAXING A SERIES of parties swirling around Miss Betty Lou Dillingham, the dance given last evening by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Evans Edge was proof enough that the "Little Season" is full speed ahead. The debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Dillingham, of Honolulu, who has been feted right and left the last few days, stepped out in a cloud of white tulle to make her bow at the largest party given for her thus far—an event that drew diplomats, residential dowagers and debutantes, as well as a sizable number of out-of-towners.

Yet, as such parties go in the Capital, the dance was comparatively small, being limited to about 200 guests. It took place at the Eighteenth street home of Mr. and Mrs. Edge, where guests danced to the music of Sidney's orchestra in the drawing room and adjoining salon, and later enjoyed a buffet supper in the dining room.

The Edge residence is an English-basement type. The hosts with their guest of honor received at the entrance to the drawing room at the head of the stairs. Slender and brown-haired, the debutante was a pretty picture in her bouffant frock which was edged with ruffles trimmed with exquisite black lace. Mrs. Edge was gowned in white taffeta, fashioned with a fitted bodice and a billowing skirt and set off with a necklace of emeralds and diamonds. The debutante's mother wore black net.

There were a number of guests from out of town, some of them friends and relatives of the hosts; others forme. classmates of Miss Dillingham at Foxcroft or fellow students at Sarah Lawrence College in Bronxville, N. Y. Mr. and Mrs. Loyall Sewall, of Maine, brother and sister-in-law of Mrs. Edge, were here for the party, as were her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. John Williams, of Baltimore. Other Baltimoreans who motored over for the dance included Mr. and Mrs. Keyser Mahley, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Brewster 3d, and Mr. and Mrs. George Carey.

Many Here From Other Cities

Most of Miss Dillingham's friends from other cities stopped with Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor and their debutante daughter, Adelaide, also a former Foxcroft student, or stayed at the Sulgrave Club. They included Miss Mary Aldrich, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Winthrop Aldrich, of New York; Miss Audrey Iselin, of New York, and Miss Nancy Iselin, of Middleburg; Miss Mary Erdman, Miss Elizabeth Green, Miss Martha Michaelis, Miss Nancy Penn Smith and Miss Constance Shepherd.

Miss Valentine Yzelli, of England, who is visiting the Third Secretary of the British Embassy and Mrs. H. A. C. Rumbold, came to the dance with her hosts. Also present were Miss Carolyn Levering, of Baltimore, whose engagement to Stuart Wyeth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Wyeth, was recently announced, and Miss Jane Stevenson, of Middleburg, recently bethrothed to Robinson McIlvaine, of Washington.

Dinner Parties Precede Dance

Numerous dinner parties preceded the dance, the largest of which was given by Mr. and Mrs. Lee Warren in honor of Miss Dillingham. This diner took place at the 1925 F street Club, and among the 60 guests were Mrs. Dillingham and Mr. and Mrs. Edge.

Other dinner hosts included the Peruvian Ambassador, Manuel de Freyre y Santander, who gave a small party at the Embassy; the Counselor of the Belgian Embassy and Baroness de Gruben; Mr. and Mrs. William KcKee Dunn, Mrs. Nelson Perin, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burling, jr., who entertained some of the "younger marrieds," and Mrs. Granger Blair. The latter's guests included Mr. and Mrs. Loyall Sewell, Mr. and Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock, Mr. and Mrs. George Sloane, of Warrenton; Miss Marion Trumbull, Pentdleton Turner, Arthur Krock and James M. Beck, brother of Mrs. Fahnestock.

Several Diplomats Among Guests

The French envoy, Count Rene de Saint Quentin, whom Mr. and Mrs. Edge knew when Mr. Edge was United States envoy to France, came in for a while. Others present included the Misses Martha and Virginia Bacon, with whom Miss Dillingham and her mother have been staying here; Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Mrs. Truxtun Beale, who gave a small dinner dance for Miss Dillingham on Sunday evening; the Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Espil, who returned earlier in the day from a stay in Pinehurst; the Counselor of the Netherlands Legation and Countess van Rechteren Limpurg; Maj. Ferry Heath; Countess van der Burch and Mr. and Mrs. William Lacy.

Members of the younger set present included three debutantes of the season, the Misses Adelaide Chatfield-Taylor, Maisie Howard and Ann Wilkinson; Miss Nancy Leiter, Miss Anne Perin, Countess Guy de Baillet Latour, and, in the stag line, Jacques Truelle, Counselor of the French Embassy; Jacques Dumaine, the First Secretary; Amory Lawrence, John Stonborough, Clarence Hewes and many others.

Miss Dillingham will leave today to return to her studies. Her mother plans a trip to Richmond, where she will visit friends before leaving later in the season with Mrs. Robert Low Bacon for a stay in Puerto Rico.

Yesterday, Miss Dillingham was guest of honor at a tea given by Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss at her Georgetown estate, Dumbarton Oaks. The beautiful grounds are now at their loveliest and the guests yesterday took advantage of the pleasant weather to stroll through the gardens and walks overlooking the swimming pool.

"French Frolic" Pleases Them

The French Ambassador, Count Rene de Saint Quentin, and Mrs. Frank B. Steele, wife of the president of the Arts Club, were among the most enthusiastic spectators when the cameraman spotted them last night enjoying the Bal Boheme from the Steele box. "Paris in the Spring" was the theme of the event, which is an annual affair

Society Dances in Parisian Scenes At Arts Club's Gala Bal Boheme

De Saint Quentin Heads Official Diplomatic Group

By Elizabeth Ford.

UNDER A LIGHT BLUE paper sky, and beneath boughs of paper cherry blossoms, Washington society danced in the "streets of Paris" last evening. Denizens, for a night, of the Champs Elysee and Montmartre, the town's local "400" showed up more than 400 strong at the Arts Club's Bal Boheme at the Willard Hotel.

As close to 10:30 as possible, the official party made its appearance with the guest of honor, the French Ambassador, Count Rene de Saint Quentin, coming along later. He was accompanied to his box by "Ambassador" Frank B. Steele, president of the Arts Club, and Mrs. Steele, who was attired in a pink evening gown fashioned with a full skirt. Others in the group included Lyle A. Brookover, chairman of the ball, and Commander Laurance T. Safford, who was aide to Mr. Steele.

Still others from the French Embassy were the Counselor, Jacques Truelle; the Military Attache, Col. Emmanuel Lombard, and Mme. Lombard; the Air Attache, Lieut. Col. Rene P. G. Weiser, and Mme. Weiser; the First Secretary, Jacques Dumaine, and the Attache, Count Gabriel de Gramont and Countess de Gramont.

Many Dinners Before Ball

Parties before and after the dance completely surrounded the evening's main event at the Willard. Among those having in guests for dinner, before going on to "Paris in the Spring," was Lady Bradford Leslie, who feted members of her box party. Mrs. M. Webster Dawley was another dinner hostess, and Capt. Clarence H. Hinkamp, U. S. N., and Mrs. Hinkamp started festivities off with cocktails. Still other dinner hosts were Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Phillips. The Misses Elizabeth and Mary Howry were among those giving late suppers after the ball was over.

After Barnee's orchestra swung into an overture written especially for the big occasion by Barnee, himself, lights were lowered and the floor committee brushed onto the scene as "Les Balayeurs." In the vernacular: street sweepers. Brandishing brooms and wearing smocks and corduroy trousers, they cleared the tenth floor for the pageant which followed.

Pageant Portrays French Capital

This consisted of a Baedecker dream of what Paris ought to look like from morning to night. First began the patrol of the police who in their blue and red uniforms marched down the boulevard, inspecting boxes for "suspicious characters." Then came a whole panorama of Parisian types—market vendors, sailors, poilus, a wedding party, the Man from Cook's and his collection of American tourists, artists, midinettes, boulevardiers, and finally Mephistopheles putting in a brief but dramatic appearance.

Heavy handclapping followed a round of folk dancing which took place halfway through the pageant; and the Marian Chase dancers doing a Rosenkavalier waltz at the finale captured a bouquet of bravos. Since invitations to the Bal Boheme sternly required that all come in costume; not all the dressing up was confined to the pageant alone.

Glimpsed roundabout: Lady Bradford Leslie as a Parisian artist, carrying a man-size palette and wearing a double-size beret; Miss Mary Howry as a midinette, in black taffeta with a fuchsia-colored petticoat ruffle, Miss Elizabeth Howry as the Empress Josephine in a black chiffon off-the-shoulder dress, lace mitts and a tiara; Mrs. Duncan Phillips in a blue flowered hoopskirt dress; Mrs. Daniel Partridge in a similar gown made of pale lavendar and trimmed with dark blue; and Mrs. M. Webster Dawley in a yellow bouffant frock and a poke bonnet.

Mrs. Ellis in 'Paris Model'

Mrs. Wade Ellis rummaged the attic for her costume—a dress which she had bought in Paris about 20 years ago. The bodice was of rhinestones and there were three elaborate flounces of sliver fringe. Topping the ensemble was the tiara and three white plumes she wore when she was presented at the Court of St. James. Mr. Ellis added to his white tie and tails an ambassadorial ribbon and a big gold medal which he once won as a member of a debating society at Washington and Lee.

Among those entertaining guests in their boxes were Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Phillips and Andrews, Mrs. William E. Borah, Mrs. Ernest Lundeen, Mrs. Paul H. Maloney, Mrs. Claude Pepper and Mrs. Harold Stephenson. Miss Mary B. Adams, attired in ice blue satin, also had box guests and entertaned at dinner preceding the dance.

Among their guests, Dr. and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, she in purple lame, entertaned the Nicaraguan Minister and Senora de Bayle. More at the ball, some of whom had still other box parties, included Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Leisenring, Col. and Mrs. John T. Harris, Mr. and Mrs. Fritz Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Willard Kochenderfer, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Morrison, Mrs. Neitah King, Mr. and Mrs. L. T. First Lady Faces Busy Schedule on Short Stay Here

Although her current stay in Washington is only a "between-trips affair," as she will be off to Seattle again this week-end, Mrs. Roosevelt faces her usual heavy schedule for the next few days.

Yesterday, she got off to a usual speedy start by being hostess at a children's party in the afternoon, following several tours through the egg-rolling crowd on the White House lawn, and her usual morning press conference. About 20 children attended the party at which small Diana Hopkins was present. Entertainment was furnished by Nancy Forbush, of Cleveland, and her Merry-O-Netts, and by Harry Baker, magician.

This afternoon, Mrs. Roosevelt and the Cabinet hostesses will entertain at a tea for wives of Representatives. Tomorrow, at noon, the First Lady will receive members of the National Society of Patriots and Founders and then she will go on to the luncheon of the Seventy-fifth Congressional Club at Hotel 2400. On Thursday she will attend the lecture to be given by Dr. Henry Noble MacCracken, and on Friday afternoon she will accompany the President to Mount Vernon. On Saturday, she will leave for Seattle, to be gone until April 25.

Lectures Included In Coming Calendar

Accompanying him were Mrs. Dee Boeckmann, national chairman of the Olympic Games. Mrs. Roosevelt is honorary chairman of the women's committee for the Olympics and the President will serve as honorary chairman for the men's committee.

Following Mrs. Roosevelt's forthcoming visit in Seattle, where she will attend the birthday party of her grandson, 9-year-old Curtis Dall, on April 19, she will leave the West Coast and start back across the country, making four speeches en route to the Capital.

Guggenheims Are Hosts

Official, diplomatic and residential circles were represented at the party given by Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim yesterday afternoon at their home at 2700 Macomb street.

The hosters, who received in the drawing room with her husband, wore a gown of china blue taffeta, floor length with square neckline and short puffed sleeves. Her corsage was of white orchids and she wore a single strand of pearls as her only ornament.

At the tea table assisting during part of the afternoon was Mrs. George T. Pettengill wife of Admiral Pettengill. Mrs. Pettengill was gowned in a print frock with a redingote of Navy blue and wore a small hat with small birds perched atop it for a trim. Also pouring were Mrs. Jouett Shouse, wearing a frock of the new shade of lime green. Mrs. Wallach Merriam gowned in a spring print, and Madame Prochnik.

Mrs. Swanson Among Guests

The long banquet table in the panelled dining room was centered by a huge bowl of spring flowers. Four tall silver candle holders with white tapers stood guard over an equal number of small silver bud vases, each of which held a single red rose. The table cloth was a film of exquisite ecru pointe venise lace.

Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, was noted wearing a matellasse frock of the new Navy green shade, with a sunburst clip of diamonds at the throat. Her hat was of doll hat type, of tawny straw with a veil, and she wore a small cape of silver fox furs.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

Frankfurters' 'At Home' Distinguished By Presence of Dozens of Single Men

WHEN ANY SINGLE, unattached men under the age of 50 appear at an official "at home" in Washington, it's news. Yesterday not only was Justice Felix Frankfurter present when his wife received, but there were even more men than women—most of them former students of the justice who now have jobs with the New Deal.

The Frankfurters' house in Georgetown is most attractive and has one of the best views of any. Practically one whole wall of the living room is window, giving out on the Potomac and Key Bridge and the woods of Virginia beyond. The living room extends the entire length of the house and the walls and bookcases are painted white. The furniture is mostly comfortable chairs and sofas covered in rose-colored figured chintz.

IN CAMBRIDGE the Frankfurters were famous for their hospitality and their house was always crowded with students. Yesterday the justice, who is genial rather than awe-inspiring, bustled about chatting with everybody and introducing the guests. Mrs. Frankfurter wore a light green silk print.

Pouring tea at a table in front of the big window was Mrs. Donald Hiss, whose husband studied under Frankfurter and who now has a job in the justice's office. She wore a navy blue printed dress with short sleeves.

Among those who called during the afternoon were Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, Mrs. Malin Craig, Mrs. Robert H. Jackson and the above mentioned scores of young men.

BEAUTIFUL glass exhibits by courtesy of Steuben and Carole Stupelle; stunning plastic murals by Marianna Von Allesch, a screen by Olin Dows, and bows of pink cherry blossoms probably by courtesy of the Dwight Davis and George Garrett back yards make the current exhibition at the Washington Museum of Modern Art Gallery one of the loveliest yet. A record crowd turned up yesterday for the preview, the last, as it happens, because the gallery will go out of existence after this showing.

Mrs. Garrett and Mrs. Davis have arranged the exhibit themselves, spending endless hours putting blown glass knick-knacks and delicately colored rugs in place. Both were present yesterday, as were Mrs. Henry Morgenthau and Henry Morgenthau 3d, home from Princeton; Mrs. Peter G. Gerry, Mrs. Richard Wigglesworth, in navy blue with a crisp white frill; Mrs. Garrett Myron Hofer, Mrs. Dean Acheson, Mrs. Selden Chapin, and scores of others.

Frances Miller and Miss Von Allesch were two of the artists there in person. The former was a spring symphony in a yellow blouse, pale green skirt, and broadbrimmed hat with ribbon streamers. She is staying at the Sulgrave Club while in Washington. Mrs. Miller, who does rugs and textiles, entered the designing business because she couldn't find any American craft work she thought suitable for furnishing her home. She has "done" the homes of many prominent New Yorkers.

MRS. CHARLES DARLINGTON will leave today to join Mr. Darlington in New York, where they will make their home. Mr. Darlington resigned last winter from the State Department to enter private business and Mrs. Darlington has remained here, hoping to sublet their house. At the moment it is being occupied by Mr. and Mrs. John Laylin, whose young children, with their nurse, are en route back from school in Switzerland.

Mrs. P. H. Maloney Honors Mrs. E. W. Pou

Mrs. Paul H. Maloney, wife of Representative Maloney, of Louisiana, gave a luncheon for 60 guests yesterday, followed by bridge, in honor of Mrs. Edward W. Pou, of Smithfield, N. C., who is visiting here.

Pink sweet peas were used on the small luncheon tables as centerpieces, and the place cards were decorated with sprays of cherry blossoms. The party was held at the Congressional Club.

Mrs. Gilbert La Gorce And 2 Children Here

Mrs. Gilbert G. La Gorce, with her daughter, Betty, and son, John, of Hingham, Mass., are mother, Mrs. Benjamin R. Parker, spending two weeks with her on Potomac pike.

Mr. La Gorce is the new England representative of the National Geographic Society.

Capital Civic Theater Held One of the Best

Stage Magazine Authority Praises Local Group in Symposium Held At Meeting at Hurja Residence

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor

Designating the Washington Civic Theater as one of the key community theaters of the country, Albert McCleery, of Stage Magazine, yesterday participated in a symposium on the organization held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, 2419 California street northwest.

"The Washington Civic Theater was chosen as host for the coming congress of the Confederacy of American Community Theaters, to be held here May 11, 12 and 13, because of its importance. Only its newness prevents it from being more widely recognized," he said, paying tribute to the director, F. Cowles Strickland.

"Of the 15,000 amateur groups in the country, 300 are community theaters which will be represented at the congress. The convention will be an excellent example of Americana. We have neither a peasant theater nor a labor theater; ours represents our democracy," said Mr. McCleery. "The professional theater in the East failed the Middle West, so it created a theater of its own."

The most striking feature of the community theaters throughout the country is their similarity, said Mr. McCleery. In Pennsylvania, Missouri, Texas, Nebraska, California, wherever he has been in 17 trips across the country in three years, he has found the same type of people interested in the same kind of plays. "Our Town" for instance, is being given this season by 125 different groups—and many playwrights now receive as much from royalties on amateur productions as from professional performances.

Layman Finds His Voice and Is Heard

"For the first time, the footlights have broken down the glamour element and the layman is coming in to ... the theater and guide its fate," said Mr. McCleery. "The terr... little theater' died in '29. It carried the torch through the '20s but the community theater has succeeded it with the civic leadership which the little theater did not want."

Mr. McCleery declared the confederacy of community theaters would never have its meetings in New York. "It is the wrong atmosphere," he said.

He is of the opinion community theaters will contribute to the professional stage many stars "because you can't keep a Cornell or a Hepburn down," and he believes a national school of the theater is not necessary. Where the goal is hard to attain the mediocre will be eliminated on the way up, he said.

Mr. Strickland, discussing the Washington Civic Theater, announced plans for giving children's plays next season.

This will represent one of the by-products of having such a trained group in the community, he said. Other community service has been the presentation of the skit for the Red Cross in its roll call, and for other groups in similar campaigns; the making of a motion picture, shown yesterday, dramatizing the work of the Self-Help Exchange, and preparation of a pageant, for which the first rehearsal was held last night, to be given at the National Red Cross convention this month.

Should Remove Stigma From Amateur

Mr. Strickland said he looked forward to having a play each week in future seasons. Both he and Mr. McCleery asserted the stigma should be removed from the "amateur" in the theater.

Other speakers were Malcolm Ross, of the Labor Relations Board; Jay Carmody, dramatic critic, and Miss Barbara Donald, chairman of the audience committee. Lawrence M. C. Smith, of the board of directors, and Oliver Gasch presided at the meeting.

After the program Mrs. Hurja was hostess at tea. Among those who attended were Lee D. Butler, president of the board; Edward Acheson, Mrs. Acheson, Mrs. Robert Allen, Mrs. Charles A. Baker, Kenneth Banghart, Miss Martha Blair, H. Lee Boatwright, jr., Miss Nancy Brereton, Mrs. Morris Cafritz, Mrs. Thomas Richard Cowell, Miss Helen Davis, John Dobbs, Miss Alice Dodge, Mrs. Frances Starr Donaldson, John Dreier.

Twentieth Century Clubs Raise Hospital Funds at Card Party

The first funds toward the gift to be presented to Gallinger Hospital by the Twentieth Century Club in celebration of its fiftieth anniversary in 1940, were raised yesterday by a large card party given in the ballroom of the Raleigh Hotel. The club will provide occupational therapy equipment for the crippled children's ward at Gallinger and hopes also to furnish a room there as a library for children.

The large ballroom of the Raleigh was filled with tables, where nearly 500 members and their guests played. In the reception room, adjoining stables were set up, with cake, candy, flowers and "white elephants" for sale—all adding to the substantial proceeds of the party. Mrs. Edward C. Montgomery, club president, was there to welcome guests as they arrived. Among those who attended was Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, president of the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs, who had come from the council meeting of the federation in the morning.

Mrs. Francis Jerome Burke Healy, of Ireland, sister of Mrs. Karl Fenning, former president of the club, was also among the guests, as were Mrs. J. A. Mendelson, formerly of Tientsin, China, who addressed the club at its last meeting, and Mrs. George Ruhland.

Democrats Hear Mrs. Kerr, WPA Official

'Unfinished Business' Subject of Talk Before Party Club

There is plenty of work to be done and there are plenty of real Americans to do it, Mrs. Florence Kerr, assistant director of the WPA, told members of the Woman's National Democratic Club yesterday at their weekly luncheon in the club house, 1526 New Hampshire avenue.

Taking "Unfinished Business" as her subject, Mrs. Kerr discussed the various ways in which projects are set up by the WPA to aid in public health work, flood control, the control of soil erosion, water pollution and to carry on road building and community beautification. There is need for more research as to what needs to be done but, despite unemployment, she asserted there is actually plenty of work if the unfinished jobs in various fields throughout the Nation are to be completed.

She challenged the statement that people were unwilling to work and declared they were not willing but eager. She urged that the importance of service should be emphasized to young people instead of security, "in order to re-enlist that American drive and get started again."

Mrs. Kerr took issue with the opinion that construction projects should be carried on to the exclusion of other types of work. She said such a policy would result in depriving of work the 283,000 women now employed in the program, all supporting dependents.

She asserted she considered the art program the most permanent and important work in the WPA.

Mrs. Claude Pepper, wife of Senator Pepper, and first vice president of the club, presided. Mrs. Kerr was introduced by Miss Mary Blakewell. She paid tribute to Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, her predecessor in the WPA, who was among the guests at the head table.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN

Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait. Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills. —Adv.

District's Last Farm, in Family For 77 Years, Doomed by Road

Post Staff Photos.

George Linden (top), 71-year-old farmer who has worked the soil on his farm in southeast Washington for 52 years, continues to till the soil as the Government plans to run a highway across his land. Lower—Morris Linder follows the plow. The Linder family have been on the farm for 77 years. Now, if the road plan is carried out, the Linders will have to move

George Lindner, 71, Whose Land Has Supplied Vegetables for Many Tables, Reluctant to Leave Fertile Acres

The last farm in the District is doomed.

The chocolate, loamy earth that George Lindner acquired from his father 52 years ago and worked and watched while it brought to life vegetables for the tables of Washington, is soon to disappear to accommodate a highway between Fourth street and Wheeler road southeast.

George Lindner, 71, has a back like a soldier's, a Bavarian ancestry and a pair of small, gray eyes that can look deeply into a piece of ground to call it good earth or not. He has two stout sons, James and Morris, and a daughter, Catherine, who worked with him yesterday, bendin- low upon the field to place spring seedlings in the ground.

In Family 77 Years

George Lindner called his sons and daughter to help explain what, of a sudden, was occurring. He used the blunt implement that has been easing the shoots into the ground, as a pointer.

"See," he said, aiming the implement across the field, "the road would start off from there and take right off through here. Five acres would go from here and about seven from over there." He pointed across the mintbed.

"It's good ground. My boys here have been raised as farmers. They will have to learn something else to do. We can move, Ja, but where will there be land like this?"

"It is pretty in this valley; it's like a little paradise here when things are up," said Catherine. "He worked it for 50 years; Michael Lindner had it first. That was 77 years ago."

10,000 Celery Plants

"I worked it 52 years," said George Lindner. "In 1913 I had 10,000 celery; and now there are the cantaloupes, beets, cabbages and kale. What will I do; they say a man will be paid and will go someplace else. Ja; but in 100 acres any place else would he find this? That hill up there . . . I have acres there, but it is a hill-side. This is a garden. Now the Park and Planning Commission—is that it?—sends for me; but I'm getting old and I send my son, and he must go back again for another trial.

"You see what I mean? The road—they have to have it—would start right there and come down through my garden. Now me, ja, I am getting old. I don't know how to feel, that I've got to leave it. But my sons were raised as gardeners and they must go on."

Eyelash Dyes May Blind User, G. W. Clinic Told

Serious inflammation of the cornea and partial loss of sight may follow application of caustic eyelash dyes in beauty parlors, Dr. John Green, of the St. Louis University Medical School, told the George Washington University postgraduate course in ophthalmology yesterday.

Speaking to 200 specialists attending the third annual six-day session, Dr. Green declared that many cases of women suffering from congestion and discharges from the eyes may result from allergies to certain cosmetics.

Dr. William L. Benedict, of the Mayo Clinic, cautioned against operating on the sinus to treat blindness believed caused by sinus infections. He recommended injections of typhoid vaccine or sows' milk. The resulting shock, he explained, had curative value.

Resolution Asks Lifting of Ban; Hillcrest Group Investigates Tax

Bingo, played for charity, is all right even if the District Attorney's office has banned the game as a form of gambling, the Kalorama Citizens Association decided last night.

The association adopted a resolution asking that the ban on bingo be lifted, but not until emphatic protests had been voiced by Mrs. Harvey Wiley, former president and the association's present recording secretary, and other members.

In another resolution, the association deplored the proposed transfer of the playground department to the Board of Education and advocated creation of a board of recreation in which all recreational supervision would be concentrated.

Hillcrest

Hillcrest Citizens Association last night named a committee to look into the recently-assessed paving tax for residents along Branch avenue, from Alabama avenue southeast to the District line.

It was asserted during the discussion that no tax had been assessed for the improvement of Branch avenue above Alabama avenue to Pennsylvania avenue four years ago. It was further averred that gasoline tax funds should be used to pay for the new paving.

Southeast Businessmen

The Southeast Businessmen's Association last night advocated increased school facilities in the southeast section, particularly in Anacostia, while opposing construction of the proposed Penal Wharf in southeast Washington.

Arthur Shaffer was elected president; A. W. Lee, first vice-president; M. C. McGrath, second vice-president; O. W. Rickar, third vice-president; A. J. Berlin, treasurer; Louis F. Frick, secretary; George T. McVennie, sergeant-at-arms; and Past President Clarence F. Donohoe, honorary vice-president.

Because "spring is just around the corner," William C. Yarbrough, 24, of 1918 H street northwest, failed to report to police that his overcoat was stolen from his automobile, parked on E between Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets northwest, last Wednesday.

However, when his boss heard about it, a letter was immediately sent Maj. Ernest W. Brown, and a police investigation promptly was started. Yarbrough is assistant secretary to Senator Caraway (Democrat), of Arkansas.

Scream Saves Purse

Helen L. Johanson, 38, of Arlington, frightened away a colored man yesterday who struck her in the face and smashed her eyeglasses when she refused to give up her pocketbook. The incident occurred as she was getting into her car after leaving the Homeopathic Hospital, where she had been visiting her sick husband. The man ran away when she screamed and she went back to the hospital to be treated for scratches.

Faith Costs Trousers

Never trust a stranger with your trousers—at least one man will remember this pointed moral today.

Yesterday he parked his trousers on a chair in a bus station preparatory to taking a shower. As he bathed water splashed on the garment. So he sent it out by a colored man to be pressed. The man never returned. A borrowed coat provided covering.

Wolf Assails Labor Act Amendments

Charges Attempt to Cripple Law at Union Mass Meeting

Proposed amendments are designed to "cripple" the Wagner national labor relations act, Benedict Wolf, former secretary to the National Labor Relations Board, last night told a mass meeting at the Restaurant Workers Hall.

Wolf derided those who askd for a "balanced act." "The Burke amendments are clearly not intended to balance the act," he said, "but rather to emasculate it."

Wolf was secretary to the NLRB when it was first set up under the NIRA in 1933. He is now a labor attorney in New York City.

The assembly, representing 33 local organizations, adopted resolutions against any amendments to the Wagner act "at this time," and setting up a "council to protect the Wagner labor act."

Other speakers at the meeting were Costas Alexion, president of the Hotel and Restaurant Workers Local 781 (A. F. L.)), who pointed out that the Wagner act was responsible for the great growth of organized labor, and William Rodgers, president of the Industrial Union Council (C. I. O.), who pledged the support of local C. I. O. unions against the amendments.

36 Escape as Richmond Bus Catches Fire

Thirty-six passengers of a Washington bus, en route to Richmond, escaped uninjured early this morning when it caught on fire on Lee highway, near Centerville, Va., 6 miles south of Fairfax.

It was believed the fire was started by a road flare which had rolled under the passing vehicle. Volunteer Fairfax firemen halted the blaze, but the bus was unable to continue the journey. Virginia Stage Coach Co., with Washington headquarters at New York avenue and Twelfth street northwest, rushed a second bus to the scene.

Drive Planned To Halt Child Traffic Deaths

3-Point Program Is Outlined by Safety Promotion Group

A three-point program to halt child traffic fatalities was laid down last night by the safety promotion committee of the D. C. Traffic Advisory Council. Participating in the conference were representatives of schools, parents, playgrounds and the District government.

The committee's activity will follow these three lines:

Education—An intensive effort to teach safety to preschool and younger school children, to educate in all adult groups reaching the parents.

Expansion of play facilities—more play spaces, more use of playgrounds, longer periods of supervised play.

Publicity.—Co-operative effort to get public support.

In opening the meeting, Chairman E. S. Hege, said: "Because of the high child traffic fatality record last summer, we believe a special effort by all parties concerned should be made this year to prevent a recurrence of this distressing record."

Estranged Wife Stabbed to Death By Her Husband

A colored man chased his wife across a Cleveland Park street yesterday afternoon, cornered her in a vacant house and stabbed her to death. He was arrested within 20 minutes.

The woman, Willie Ross, 30, was a maid at the home of Arthur Clarendon Smith, 2949 Macomb street northwest, and had left her husband, also named Willie Ross, 25, last Wednesday.

According to police, Ross smashed a pane of glass at the Smith home with his fist, entered and chased the woman to 3022 Macomb street.

As homicide squad detectives reached the scene, a colored man requested treatment for a cut hand at Emergency Hospital. He was the man sought. His hand was cut when he smashed the window.

Baby Lost as He Wanders From 'Older Sister,' 4

Francis Joseph O'Neill, aged 2½, set out to roll eggs yesterday afternoon in Montrose Park and ended up in the Third Precinct Police Station.

Francis Joseph wandered away from an older sister (aged 4) and made his way to Dupont Circle, where he was picked up about 3 p. m. by Private H. W. Carmichael. He could only tell Carmichael that he "used to live" at Twenty-seventh and P streets northwest.

Carmichael inquired among the neighbors but nobody knew the boy, so he was taken to the police station, where he stayed until he was found by his frightened mother, Mrs. Virginia O'Neill, 3029 M street northwest.

Sales Tax Cut In New D. C. Revenue Bill

Nichols Introduces Measure Based On Decision on Income Levies

While experts differed on revenue estimates, Chairman Nichols, of the House sub-committee on fiscal affairs, yesterday introduced a revised District tax bill estimated to yield sufficient funds to balance the 1940 budget and possibly produce a small surplus.

Offered as a compromise in light of the Supreme Court decision on reciprocal income taxes, the bill will be taken up by the Nichols subcommittee in executive session this week.

Major changes are:

Reduction in the proposed retail sales tax from 2 to 1 per cent on all purchases except foods, medicines, newspapers and periodicals.

A $10,000 base instead of $14,000 for the personal income levy.

$1.50 Realty Levy Figured

The measure carries the original Pond proposal for a sliding scale up to $1.75 for the realty tax rate, but estimates are based on continuation of the $1.50 tax. The difference of $3,300,000 would be unnecessary, officials estimate, at least for the next fiscal year, if the revised legislation is enacted.

Auditor Daniel J. Donovan estimates the new bill will just balance the District budget as approved by the House, but Dr. Chester B. Pond, tax specialist, who prepared the original program, figures the yield will be $800,000 in excess of next year's needs. The excess would be absorbed, he holds, by growing operating costs.

Donovan estimates that the revised dual income-sales tax would raise $4,000,000, while Dr. Pond figures it at $4,150,000. Donovan estimates the sales tax return at $2,500,000 and the income yield at $1,500,000, while Pond puts them at $2,275,000 and $1,875,000, respectively.

Agrees on Minor Items

The other major difference between the two fiscal experts is the estimated return from the 5 per cent corporate income tax. The auditor contends it will not produce more than $2,000,000, while Pond lists it at $2,700,000.

On minor levies carried in the revised bill the two are in substantial agreement. The figures are $360,000 to $400,000 on additional utility taxes, $25,000 from parking lot licenses and $40,000 from prorated personal property levies on motor vehicles.

Inquisitive People Provide New Life Interest for Artist

HARRY STUART FONDA

75-Year-Old Painter's Art School Grows From Incident at Leavenworth; He Also Works on Opera Orchestration

(This series is about men and women 70 or older who are finding so-called "old-age" is really a lot of fun. They still are producing and getting a big thrill out of their work or hobbies. You know some qualifiers. Tell us who they are—Editor's note.)

By Gerald G. Gross.

It's a good thing for Harry Stuart Fonda that people are curious and inquisitive by nature. Otherwise he probably would be a soft and doddering old man today.

The turning point in his life occurred about six years ago in Leavenworth, Kans. Still depressed over the loss of his wife a few years earlier, he had left his home in San Francisco to live with his daughter and her husband, Maj. L. L. Martin, then stationed at Fort Leavenworth. A painter and art instructor for nearly half a century, he seemed to have little will for painting and less for teaching anymore.

One day, however, he went outdoors to work on a canvas. As he wielded his brush, people began to gather around. Some of them asked questions. Obviously they were impressed.

Mrs. Martin suggested to her father that he take a few pupils. He agreed, quite unenthusiastically. On the first day of classes nine candidates appeared. Two years later, when Mr. Fonda and the Martins moved to Washington, the former had to leave 40 students.

Today he is in his seventy-fifth year, operates a thriving art school in a garage-studio behind his residence in Clarendon, Va.; is working on a complete orchestration for his comic operetta, "Prince Toggery," and doesn't know what a dull moment is.

The teacher now is a peppy, gay-humored gentleman who firmly believes that his resumption of classes in 1933 gave him a new lease on life. He is tanned and healthy looking.

Mr. Fonda was born in Marysville, Calif., and went to San Francisco at the age of 2. He vividly remembers the earthquake of 1868 and he escaped unhurt the more celebrated fire and earthquake of 1906.

After being graduated from the California School of Fine Arts, he went abroad to study in 1892 and fulfilled two ambitions before his return in 1896: He exhibited in the Paris Salon and climbed Mount Vesuvius.

Zorina for National in "I Married an Angel"

To Play First Local Stage Engagement May 1; 'Pygmalion' Wins Boxoffice Prize Award; This, That and the Other About Amusements

SO ZORINA FINALLY is going to reach the National Capital again, after all.

After a solid year at the Shubert Theater, in New York City, and eight capacity weeks in Chicago, it is announced that Dwight Deere Wiman's enormously successful production of Rodgers and Hart's musical comedy, "I Married an Angel," will come to the National Theater for one week, beginning Monday night, May 1. Dennis King, Vivienne Segal and Walter Slezak are foremost in the dancing star's support.

BELL

Rodgers and Hart concocted this effervescent musical fable from a light comedy by John Vazzary. Mr. Wiman is reputed to have given it a sumptuous production. It will be presented here exactly as offered during its impressive Broadway run.

But getting back to Vera Zorina, it will be recalled that she was one of the guest stars present in Washington on the occasion of the President's birthday celebrations a year ago. Her ingenuous charm made a deep impression on all who met her. As a matter of fact, she was so ingenuous that one wondered how she ever could strike fire on either the stage or the silver sheet. That puzzlement was completely dissolved by her dynamic stellar appearance on the screen in "The Goldwyn Follies," in Technicolor. Zorina proved a veritable fire-ball on her toes—she is a graduate of the Russian ballet. Her hit in "I Married an Angel," of course, is history—as is, also, her later marriage to Georges Balanchine, the famous dance director.

So the point of all this is that this year we made another heroic effort to have Zorina among those present at the President's birthday celebrations, even wiring Mr. Wiman frantically at any point of the compass where he happened to be at the moment about it. The celebrations, you will recall, were on a Monday night. Sunday night, Mr. Wiman graciously agreed, Vera could be here, but not Monday. It would have taken too much money out of the box-office—a perfectly just and equitable contention. It would have.

But now, at long last, here she comes again, anyway.

Just another faint echo of that inevitable "I told you so." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of George Bernard Shaw's comedy of 'Pygmalion" was selected by the National Screen Council as winner of the Boxoffice Blue Ribbon Award for the month of March. This award is determined by the vote of national civic, social and religious leaders, polled through Boxoffice Magazine.

Incidentally, there have been some "Boxoffice Champions," as determined by the Motion Picture Herald's audit of bona fide, key-city boxoffice statements, that have not been reported here, as is this column's wont from month to month. The March champions, if that is what you have been worrying about, were six in number. Their trend was a little in the direction of melodrama, with slight leavenings of comedy and romance. The six national favorites, as expressed in terms of money at the ticket wicket, were "Gunga Din," "Idiot's Delight," "Jesse James," "Pygmalion," "Made for Each Other" and "Wings of the Navy." All of these have been seen and approved by Washington.

Breaking down the winners into producing companies, we have one for RKO-Radio, two for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, one for Twentieth Century-Fox, one for David O. Selznick and United Artists, and one for Warner Brothers. I hope that adds up to six.

Comes a call from Fred Waring, whose Pennsylvanians are holding forth on the stage at Loew's Capitol Theater this week. Fred is one of the most astute showmen connected with public amusement—whether it be on the stage or over the air—and, unlike so many of his confreres, follows no fixed groove in his formulation of programs. Having been privileged, years ago, to sit in on his rehearsals and observe, first-hand, the time, thought, effort and musicianship that go into the making of one of his programs, I take my battered, second-hand Stetson off to him as the "daddy of them all." Perhaps I am just a wee mite prejudiced. Waring's Pennsylvanians, as I think I have said here a few thousand times before, were the star act on the first radio program of the old Crandall Saturday Nighters, with which we were remotely associated. It will be fun to go back stage this afternoon and meet his old-timers all over again and the newcomers for the first time.

As this is written, the results of yesterday's egg-rollings—and what a day they had for it!—are not in, but last Saturday added to the Easter joy of several youngsters out Bethesda way, what with the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Tribune and Sidney Lust's Boro Theater hiding something like 1,000 eggs and offering all manner of prizes for the lucky finders.

The "Golden Goose Eggs," wrapped in cellophane and cashable for $1, were discovered by Karl Hurley, age 11; Lois Niemeyer, 10; Jerry Anderson, 4; Helen Claxton Lewis, 4, and Jerry Summer, 6, all residents of the Bethesda area.

Doris Jean Myers, age 9, 5000 Battery lane, was crowned queen of the Easter festival, while a band of 150, under the direction of Raymond Hart, county bandmaster, provided music, and Art Brown, of Station WOL, presided at the microphone and put the whole merry business on the air. Fifteen hundred youngsters participated in the event.

What's all this I hear about new theaters being planned for mid-city, near midcity and new suburban locations? Something seems very definitely to be on the fire. We could name names, even if not specific sites, but that will have to wait until applications for permits are filed at the District Building. However, as usual, more of this later.

Two-Word-Description-of-Two-Nice-People Note

"Perfect hosts." And that would be Mr. and Mrs. Phil Lampkin, of an Easter Sunday night. I have witnesses!

WHEN ROBERT Montgomery met Vice President Garner in Washington a few days ago, the screen star became imbued with patriotic fervor . . . He looked up at the Great Seal of the United States above him and then stared at the window through which he could see the flag flying over the Capitol . . . "What are you thinking about?" asked Garner . . . "I'm thinking," Montgomery confessed, "that some day I'll be able to tell my son that I stood under the Great Seal and at the same moment I could see the American flag flying over the Capitol of this country. It's thrilling" . . . Later, when Montgomery was leaving, a page boy delivered a package to him, "with the compliments of the Vice President" . . . "What's in it?" he asked . . . "It's something that will thrill your son when you tell him that story," Garner replied. "It's that flag you just saw."

THE C.I.O. soon will bring suit against a radio chain for refusing to broadcast its paid advertisements. The union attorneys will allege—in a trial which should establish a precedent in law—that radio stations are like railroads . . . common carriers . . . and must bear the traffic . . . The Musicians Union yesterday placed the New Friends of Music on its 'unfair" list—all because Dr. F. Stiedry, the conductor, refused to appear at the union offices to reply to charges. The ban will affect 35 musicians . . . John Barrymore was removed from his sick-bed yesterday to resume the road tour of his show. A trained nurse will accompany him.

CAPT. FRITZ Weidemann, consul general in San Francisco and Hitler's personal representative in this country, was very unhappy at being rebuffed when he visited the Fox studios in Hollywood . . . "What I wanted most here," he confided, "was to be photographed—with Shirley Temple."

EX-HEAVYWEIGHT Champion Jim Braddock and his manager, Joe Gould, have decided upon their next business venture. They'll try the wholesale liquor business and already have applied for a license . . . Nine of the members of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade, who fought for the loyalists in Spain, still are interned in France—because the French officials insist that they show proof of American citizenship. These nine have no official papers. They're Indians! . . . Harry Oshrin, the producer of "Tobacco Road," practically has come to terms with Jim Timoney, Mae West's manager, to produce the show Mae has written for herself. It's called "Lady Friends."

THE LOCAL police are searching for Healy, the self-styled "Irish Hitler." When the upper courts refused his appeal from a conviction for disorderly conduct and inciting to riot, Healy fled the jurisdiction. The detectives are checking a report that he tried to do organization work for Homer Martin . . . Eugene Schoen's new decorative scheme for the New Yorker Hotel will feature an illusion of snowfall in the summer time . . . "What's My Name?" will be the program succeeding Fred Allen's during his vacation . . . "Crisis," the new documentary film about Czecho-Slovakia, was shown privately on Wednesday to a Washington group of 50 New Dealers, including Justice Frankfurter.

SATURDAY NIGHT one of the local cafes had only two customers. "Too bad," one of the duo consoled the proprietor—who answered: 'If you think THIS is bad, you should've been here yesterday. NOBODY came" . . . Clifford Odets will broadcast April 13, from Mexico City, on its "Good Neighbor Hour" . . . Gregory LaCava saw the movie, "The Story of Vernon and Irene Castle," and criticized: "It's a very good picture—but Vernon Castle's life wasn't properly constructed" . . . When Edna Ferber appeared as part of Orson Welles' radio version of "Showboat," her plea for tolerance, at the end of the broadcast, elicited such mail that the sponsor—who had written a complimentary letter—sent investigators to interrogate each letter-writer.

ELIOTT ROOSEVELT went to the Kit Kat Klub Friday night and there was introduced to Evalyn Walsh McLean, who was wearing her Hope Diamond . . . "Yes, this is the Hope Diamond," said Mrs. McLean, removing the gem. "Here, touch it" . . . "Oh, no," Roosevelt declined . . . "Then would you like to buy it?" Mrs. McLean suggested . . . Roosevelt removed a one-dollar bill from his pocket . . . "You mean," asked Mrs. McLean, "you're offering $1 for it?" . . . "No," Roosevelt assured, pocketing the dollar bill, "I mean I'd rather have a $1 bill than the Hope Diamond."

In Hollywood

By Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., April 10.—Looms now something new on our horizon! Another film producing company—"Commodore Pictures"—backed by Good Humor money. Which I always thought was the Good Humor Ice Cream Co. of Hollywood, and associated it with white autos and the tinkle of cow bells.

HOPPER

Seems I was wrong, for it is none other than John K. Raskob, who is, if you're up on your politics, one of the economic "biggies." Good Humor is his pet—a kind of hobby.

Well, already Commodore is forging right ahead, with stories lined up, writers working and plans to get under way within the next few weeks. There'll be no contracts, and everything will be on a one-picture basis. Now, don't get the idea from this that it's a shoestring sort of proposition. Far from it! They'll use only the creme-de-la-creme, and have high hopes of borrowing stars from other studios if necessary.

Harold Young is slated to direct their first opus, and shooting starts as soon as releasing difficulties are straightened out in the East. Here's wishing you smooth sailing, Commodore!

Universal is the first studio to face intelligently, a major problem—that of visitors. And they've taken a page right out of radio! They'll build a visitors' gallery high above the set, and show the most lavish scenes in progress. Thus this company will lost none of the "I saw them make that picture" publicity value. Admission will be by invitation with tickets for seats. And you'll be able to stay there as long as you like, but allowed nowhere else on the lot. Which will give actors an audience too—and how we love one. Smart idea all round, eh?

Bing Crosby's voice never was better than in "East Side of Heaven"—he even astonished himself. Says it's largely due to Bernard Brown, head of U's sound department, who's done such grand things with the Deanna Durbin pictures. And Baby Sandy Henville whose father was a well-liked milkman, was born for the screen. That baby is why so many parents are adopting that slogan—"If at first you don't succeed, try, try again." Joan Blondell tried, but the picture didn't do much to advance her career—though it's a grand picture—you'll love it.

Elaine Barrie's story in a current magazine titled, "Hollywood Treated Me Like A Leper" was written by none other than our charming, conservative Boston Globe correspondent, Mayme Ober Peak, whose book about us will be on the stands in six months. Jack Barrymore says: "Hollywood is a little like the Spanish Main, Elaine and I are both slightly piratical. And it's a very pleasant community in which to swing one's cutlasses." I asked Elaine if she were impressed with Jack. "No. He amuses me more than impresses me," said the frankest lady in our town.

When Sigrid Gurie weds Dr. Spangard in June, there'll be no work to interfere with their Honolulu honeymoon. "I've promised him that," says Sigrid. But I suspect she's anxious to let that four months' contract with her present agent expire—now that she's no longer under contract to Goldwyn.

Sorry to hear about Marlene Dietrich being ill with flu. Been wondering if I should return those blue sheets she sent me! Haven't brought me luck—I bet on that darned horse three times and lost.

Mount Vernon

Before he began proving that "You Can't Cheat an Honest Man," Charlie McCarthy made a sleek comedy with Adolph Menjou yclept "Letter of Introduction," which the Open Air Theater on the Richmond highway is offering through tomorrow night.

Charlie is introduced more as a gag in this comedy of a theatrical boarding house in which Andrea Leeds is the lucky girl who meets the big star who makes her his leading lady. Edgar Bergen, as an out-of-work ventriloquist, George Murphy and Mortimer Snurd are also on hand in the auto drive-in theater 3 miles south of Alexandria. Also on the program are newsreels and short subjects.

Trans-Lux

No other subject is so vital to every American citizen as that of the present European war crisis. In the 35-minute news pictorial at the Trans-Lux Theater this week, current European activities are completely and vividly portrayed. The "March of Time" episode, "Background for War," very timely specializes on activities in the Mediterranean.

Other news subjects show the actual fall of Madrid; former Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson delivering his earnest and convincing statement against the present neutrality law before the Foreign Relations Committee; an Army plane fleet holding an Army Day preview; the Navy launching a new aircraft carrier, the Wasp, while two Navy planes crash during the ceremony, and reconditioning World War destroyers, 49 of them, on the Pacific Coast.

Disaster gets attention in pictures of a horrible Mississippi bridge washout and the terrifying Sandusky fire. On the more cheerful side, the King and Queen of England fete President Lebrun of France with a state reception and appearance at the opera; Clark Gable and Carole Lombard are seen returning from their honeymoon; Man o' War celebrates his twenty-second birthday; there are some fast Golden Gloves contests, and then the exciting and thrilling Aintree Grand National Steeplechase—the Irish sweepstake classic.

An "Our Gang" comedy, "Practical Jokers," among the "shorts," is very funny, as is a very prettily presented cartoon, "The Happytots" which completes the show.

Gayety

"VALERIE PARKS' OWN SHOW." The Independent Burlesque Association presents the musical production in two acts and 22 scenes, featuring Valerie Parks, supported by Bob Ferguson, Mary Murray, Vickie Welles, Max Coleman, Billie Diamond, Leonard Cramer, Monica and the Burns Brothers. Dance numbers devised by Beverly Carr; staged by James J. Lake. Reviewed Sunday matinee by Art John, B. C. A. A.

Valerie Parks, the "find" of the current season, brings her own attraction to the Gayety Theater this week. As usual, she offers an excellent supporting cast, catchy tunes and funny comedians.

We've seen quite a few charming personalities here since the house opened in September, but the blonde Miss Parks is the one who has shown the greatest promise of enterin the top flight of outstanding artists which includes Ann Corio, Hinda Wassau and Margie Hart. Valerie, blonde and lovelier than ever, presents some unique song offerings and climaxes her good work with several dance routines that prove her an entertainer of unusual merit.

Bob Ferguson and Max Coleman headline in the comedy sector, ably supported by Leonard Cramer and Mary Murray. Ferguson, in particular, is funnier than ever before, his "court room" bit proving hilarious. Ferguson's humor is the dry type; witty, original, and, for the most part, lacking any questionable humor.

Rounding out an excellent bill are Monica, a dark-eyed damsel, whose dance numbers are better than par; the Burns Brothers, offering some nifty tap steps, and Billie Diamond, who lends a pretty fair voice to the posing numbers.

'Skylark' Is Applauded at The National

Miss Lawrence Repeats Former Local Successes In Golden Production

By Nelson B. Bell

"SKYLARK," John Golden presents Gertrude Lawrence in a new comedy-drama in three acts and four scenes, by Samson Raphaelson. Staged by the author; settings by Donald Oenslager. At the National Theater.

—THE CAST—

Ned Franklin.....William David
George Gorell.....Walter Gilbert
Faunley.....Horace Sinclair
Paulette Valentine.....Lee Patrick
Mrs. Franklin.....Ann Driscoll
Tony Kenyon.....Donald Cook
Lydia Kenyon.....Gertrude Lawrence
Harley Valentine.....Robert Burton
Bill Blake.....Glenn Anders
Greta.....Olga Hanson

It is a play of thoughtfulness, substance, romantic charm, occasional bitterness and frequent flashes of delightful comedy that Samson Raphaelson has written in "Skylark."

Revealed for the first time in Washington on the stage of the National Theater last night, this new serio-comic recital of the domestic perplexities which arise when career collides with love proved a sufficent cogent bit of dramaturgy to afford Gertrude Lawrence, its star, free and untrammeled scope for her ingratiating and brilliant talents.

"Skylark" devotes itself, at intervals, to matters that seem a little too strongly on the emotional side to be completely justified by the essentially casual quality of its theme. Husband and wife become just a trifle too wrought up over incidents in their lives that would not threaten a disruption of their home after ten years of comparative bliss. A few of the conversational passages seemed to at least one observer last evening to be too contradictory in both psychology and characterization—or are they the same thing?—and more than one scene was too heavily bogged down with verbosity to be either especially interesting or sharply and conclusively convincing.

But "Skylark" is new and still amenable to that solicitous scissoring that will resolve it into a swift-moving, pungent and highly diverting vehicles for the talents of one of the most competent actresses in the contemporary theater.

Wed To His Job—And Lydia

To give you the quick picture, Tony Kenyon is wed to his job. His job is that of a "big shot" executive with a big advertising agency. Tony also is wed to Lydia, a patient wife, whose life, on occasion, is made miserable by the catty interpositions of the womenfolk of the magnates who hold her husband's future in the hollow of their hands and heads. Tony has his close business associates, whose advice does him no discernible good. Lydia has her proponents, too, whose subtle—and sometimes blunt—suggestions do a great deal to give her a true perspective upon the problems which face her so dangerously.

Out of all this, Samson Raphaelson has hewn himself a play, in three acts and four scenes, that needs only to be abridged to take its place beside "Susan and God" as one of Miss Lawrence's most engaging semi-serious efforts.

The star is assured, amusingly humorous and acutely poignant in the diverse moods with which she has been imbued by the author. As has been demonstrated on Washington stages so many times before, there is little in the catalogue of histrionic endowments with which Gertrude Lawrence has not been endowed. She brings all of her versatility into play in her present part.

Cook and Cast Admirable

No less credit, with any sense of justice, can be bestowed upon Donald Cook, former screen player, for the excellence of his work in the opposite role of Tony Kenyon. The play, I thought, got off a little feebly—with too much business conversation—and so did Mr. Cook, but by the end of the three acts this sterling actor had compiled himself an immensely interesting and profitable evening in the theater.

There are several in the cast whom Washington knows and admires who contribute notably to the impressiveness of "Skylark" as a play with a probably enduring future. Foremost among them is Glenn Anders, as the philosophic young bibbler who has most to do with extricating Lydia from her desperate difficulties. Mr. Anders' final exit was accompanied by appreciative and heavy applause.

Author Raphaelson's direction needs to be quickened in pace, but assuredly nothing remains to be done about Donald Oenslager's extremely handsome and appropriate single setting. The receptive mood of last night's audience was given tangilbe evidence by seven curtain calls at the conclusion of the last act. One fears the best for Miss Lawrence, Mr. Raphaelson, Mr. Golden and "Skylark."

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, April 10 (INS).—The reunion of Laurel and Hardy is pleasing news to everyone who likes to laugh. Together they are a panic, separate not so funny. Stan, who had gotten out of hand with his many marriages, alimony suits, etc., never had any grievance against "Babe" Hardy, who stuck by him through all his troubles. What irked Stan was bad advice given him by those who never had his welfare at heart. When he and Hardy discussed getting together, a part of the agreement was for them to appear for Borros Morros in a remake of "Les Aviateurs," a very funny French picture. Morros will make it here with his French associate, Jacques Grinieff.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Stan looked at the original "Les Aviateurs," with Noel-Moel and Fernandel and was so delighted with it that he promptly forgot his grievances. He and "Babe" start work for Morros July 1 with Eddie Sutherland directing. Before that date they will whip up a typical Laurel and Hardy funny for the man who put them on the map, Hal Roach, Esq. Hal, of course, agreed to the Morros contract.

Loretta Young, who wants above all things to get a good story for her first free lance picture, is lunching this week with Sinclair Lewis. He'd like to sign her for "Angela Is Twenty-two" and if he is successful it means of course, that he will get a first class release for his initial movie. Loretta was so good as the deaf wife in "Alexander Graham Bell" she can pretty nearly dictate her own terms now. By the way, her little adopted daughter, Judy, is one of the prettiest children I have ever seen. Loretta took her to an Easter egg hunt at Joan Bennett's and Judy was the belle of the ball.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Despite denials, the rumor persists that Earl Carroll and Beryl Wallace, his most beautiful show girl, are secretly wed; the town's newest twosome, June Lang and Joe Pasternak at Victor Hugo's Saturday night; Helen Twelvetrees and Jack Woody, still lame from his recent accident, night clubbing; Gene Autry giving out with his latest cowboy number at the Tropics; Errol Flynn, unable to beg off from Warner's, sent his pal, Bud Ernst, to fly a sick seaman on the Sirocco, in Mexico, back for an operation; Mary Pickford entertaining for Dorothy Thompson, famous writer and lecturer, at a tea Sunday; Vic Orsatti feted Sonja Henie at a birthday party at Marcel's. Sonja escorted by Rudy Vallee, who had his entire band serenade her; Marlene Dietrich still sick with flu; Anna Sten and Eugene Frenke entertained practically the entire Russian colony at an Easter party with Russian food, vodka and all the trimmings.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Georgetown Beats Yale, 6-4, in Weird Game

Views Behind the News

Savannah, Ga., April 10.

"New York to act on Don Meade's license plea tomorrow."—Within a few hours, the New York Jockey Club will have struck a blow for honest racing or at it. The petition of Don Meade for reinstatement to the saddle poses a question that the Jockey Club ordinarily would like to duck, but is required to answer. Its answer may be far-reaching in its effects on an industry that is struggling to free itself from an unsavory reputation.

POVICH

The Meade case needs little reviewing. Don Meade, one of the better jockeys of our time, was caught red-handed committing one of the high crimes of horse racing. He was caught betting on horses in races in which he was riding other steeds At the time when the public's money was riding with Meade, Meade's money was riding with other parties in the race. Three years ago, Florida barred him for life. Last winter Florida reinstated him. This spring he seeks reinstatement on the profitable New York tracks.

Short-memoried race fans, the same who didn't get a run for their money when Meade was riding three years ago, lifted loud huzzahs for Meade in his sensational comeback last winter. They were captivated by the lad's clever and apparently honest riding. Meade made sentimentalists of 'em. They believed they were applauding a boy who had come back to go straight. They have taken up the cudgel for Meade in his ples with the New York Jockey Club.

"Race fans pulling for Meade," was the theme of one story that was written out of Hialeah last winter. It was probably true, but it prompted one New York realist to reply: "Wasted effort. Meade has always done pretty well doing his own pulling." Following the pardon of Tom Mooney, in California, Meade fans seized upon that development to urge that the boy, like Mooney, be given another chance.

But there is a slight variance in the cases of Mooney and Meade. Mooney, for 22 years, steadfastly maintained the innocence of the crime of which he was convicted, refused even to accept parole, would take nothing less than a pardon. Meade confessed his guilt after being confronted with lock-sure evidence. He is no Mooney asking another chance. He is a self-confessed transgressor.

Powerful forces are working for the reinstatement of Meade in New York. His chief sponsor is Col. E. R. Bradley, who pulled the strings that put the lad back in the saddle in Florida. The New York Jockey Club by this time is aware of the importance of the decision it must make. Legalized racing, attacked on all sides by reformers, is on thin ice. Crooked racing has been the bane of the sport. Unchecked, it will threaten the existence of even such haughty institutions as jockey clubs. The jockey club can reinstate Meade and qualify as a body, which is at once charitable—and stupid.

"Jack Doyle Quotes Yankees as 2-to-5 Favorites to Win Pennant."—And why not? The Yankees will go to the post as the shortest-priced favorites in all big-league history, but they should. Mr. Doyle can hardly be expected to be swayed by the roseate reports from the Southland about the other clubs in the American League. He knows that at this season of the year, the writing boys always over-reach themselves and apply such descriptives as 20-game winners and .350 hitters to athletes who by July will be laboring in the minors.

Doyle knows about the Yankees. He knows that they are the class of the league. He knows that while every other club in the race has one or several vexing problems, the Yankees are fixed merely to roll along. He knows it's probably a better Yankee club than the team that made a shambles of the 1938 race and then bumped off the Cubs in four straight.

He is laying 3 to 1 against the Red Sox, his second-place choice, because he knows that Boston has uncertain pitching, catching that is far from high class, and untried rookies at third base and in the outfield. And he is willing to go as high as 4 to 1 against the Tigers because he knows that the Detroit pitching at best is not in a class with the Yankees, and that the Detroit outfield cannot be considered in terms of pennant winners.

In Doyle's odds, which go on to quote the Cleveland Indians at 6 to 1, the Nats at 10 to 1, the White Sox at 30 to 1, the Browns at 50 to 1 and the Athletics at 100 to 1, there is probably more solace for Washington fans than for those of any other city, except New York.

A year ago at this time, Doyle was quoting the Yankees at 3 to 5 and the Nats at 20 to 1. Yet with the Yankees beaten down to 2 to 5 this spring, indicating that they are even a better ball team, Washington's odds are halved to 10 to 1. That means, of course, that in Doyle's estimation the Nats are a team much superior to the club that carried the Washington colors in 1938.

It is grounds for belief, however, that there is a growing possibility that Washington can finish in the first division. In Doyle's book, they rate close on the heels of the Tigers and Indians, and he won't lay more than even money that the Nats will finish worse than third. Clark Griffith hates the subject of gambling on the pennant races, but Doyle's odds, nevertheless, ought to make pleasant reading for the old gentleman.

On the Line

—With Considine

New York, April 10.—Meadows, toss another A. A. U. official on the fire, and leave me here with my letters. All nine of them, thank you:

Dear Bob: Re your piece on Man o' War's ancestry.

Lexington didn't "have Hastings." Hastings was by Spendthrift, he by Imported Australian. Spendthrift's dam was Aerolite, by Lexington, so his relationship to Hastings was no closer than the father of a human's paternal grandmother would be to that human. But what I wanted to bring out was that when radio commentators go as far astray as you did in this case, you have their scalps hanging out of your column next day. But I fear you'd be a bit upset if they should call particular attention to an occasional error of your own—or would you?

CONSIDINE

(It's not much of a scalp, Clement, but you can have it. Just leave me the dandruff. I've become attached to it. And vice versa.)

Dear Sir: I have been trying to get in touch with Hack Wilson, but the last place he worked in Brooklyn had no record of him. Pat Malone, the former Yankee and Cub pitcher, has opened a cafe in Altoona, Pa., and is holding a job open for Hack. Please pass the word along.

BUCK DUNN, Martinsburg, W. Va.

(It'd be a tragedy if Hack missed this one.)

Dear Bob: The British are supposed to take things in a carefree way in their sports, but for six weeks now their polo team has been working in an intensive way, like a big league ball club or a big-time varsity football squad. They're training in California, even to the extent of accustoming their ponies to our climate, grain, water, etc.

Meanwhile, the Americans, who are always being kidded abroad for taking their sports too seriously, are taking things easy. Tommy Hitchcock and four or five of the others are in Aiken now. Mike Phipps is in Florida. Cecil Smith in California and so is Eric Pedley. Stewart Iglehart is playing only golf, and won't pick up a polo mallet until May. Raymond Guest is racing his horses and Ebby Gerry is working in his office.

In other words, things are badly twisted. Wouldn't that make a column for you, sometime?

BOB HARRON.

(Yes. Sometime.)

Dear Sir: There has been so much stuff written about Jesse James, mostly fiction, that I think something might be written giving at least an insight into the James brothers as they were in their pursuits as sporting figures. Did you know that they raced horses even when big rewards were posted for them, dead or alive? And that Frank James once was Sam Hildreth's betting commissioner?

I was 14 when I first met them. That was in 1879 at the old Nashville, Tenn., track. I had run away from home to follow the horses and I was being harbored by Hugh Moore, training for my uncle, H. C. Snodgrass. A few doors down the barn "street" from us were two brothers, Frank and Thomas "Howard." They had seven horses, and won a good take with a filly named Evergreen.

Most of the horsemen knew who they really were, but nobody ever said anything. They seemed mighty friendly and often they'd come up our way and get in the poker game. Now it was the custom in those days for the owner to mount his stake winner in front of the stands and clip the cord by which the stake in gold was suspended in a silk bag. I'll never forget the day Evergreen won that stake. For Jesse, himself, came out, got up on the filly, and cooly performed this rite. He got a big hand from the crowd of 8,000.

J. B. SNODGRASS.

(Thank you, sir.)

Dear Bob: Here are those excerpts from that clipping out of the Troy Evening Times, October 18, 1858:

THE MORRISSEY AND HEENAN FIGHT

"The amount of money depending upon the result was immense. Never before have belligerents been allowed to make their arrangements with so much, openness and unreserve—been so lionized by the press, toasted and toadied by inefficient and favor-seeking officials, and countenanced by an indulgent public who are duly proud of all such evidences of our superior civilizations.

"Both men are, as they say of fat hogs at cattle shows, in prime condition. Heenan is emphatically a fresh man. He has never endured the pummeling and badgering his opponent has passed through in a thousand and one barroom encounters. His brawny muscles are firm and tough as sole leather. His sledge-hammer fists present a fine field for the operation of a cold chisel. His lungs are like a blacksmith's bellows in capacity.

"In view of the fact that each party goes into this combat with a full knowledge of its risks, we could bear with serenity the intelligence that Mr. Morrissey had lost an eye, or the nose of Mr. Heenan had been resolved into the form of a spitted sprat. We have no wagers to win or lose. We simply reflect public opinion. From this we learn myriad and conflicting things. Either of these opinions may be correct. Both of them cannot be. We do not care which is borne out in the result."

ROSE COHEN.

Schmitt's Broken Leg Dismal End to Georgetown Victory Over Yale

Schmitt's Leg Is Broken In Collision

Runs Into McFadden While Chasing Ball In Outfield; 1,000 See Elis Beaten

By Jack Munhall.

After three hours of the weirdest college baseball witnessed here in recent years, about 1,000 fans at the Georgetown Medical School Field were left yesterday with the following food for thought:

1. A 6-4 Georgetown victory over Yale, accomplished by rallies in the seventh and eighth, extending the Hoyas' winning streak to three straight.

2. The pitiful sight of Johnny Schmitt, G. U. outfielder, being carried from the game in the ninth with a broken right leg.

3. Five innings of hitless and runless baseball William Wixted, G. U. sophomore, unwound in his first varsity start.

4. Great relief work of another G. U. sophomore, Vinnie Powers, who allowed only one hit in the last three frames, fanned seven batters, and received credit for his second triumph in three days.

It was indeed a bewildering baseball drama that unfurled on the Hilltop field yesterday. There were thrills. There were spills and there was tragedy and comedy, too.

Retires 13 Batters

The excitement was produced first by the amazing performance of the 6-foot 5-inch Wixted who retired 13 batters in a row from the first through the fifth inning, before the "13" jinx caught up with him and Yale got its first safety, a fluke hit, which fell between Schmit and Joe McFadden in left center.

Excitement also was occasioned by Georgetown's comeback which netted it a single run in the seventh and three more in the eighth to clinch a game it apparently had won until the sixth when Yale transformed a 2-0 deficit to a 4-2 lead.

The tragedy, of course, was the injury to Schmitt, star Georgetown outfielder and basketball player, who was knocked to the ground in a collision with a teammate, Joe McFadden, when chasing a Yale fly, and the comedy, seven errors for the two teams.

With none out in the final inning and Yale threatening to tie the count after Harry Holt, lead-off batter, had walked, Jerry Besse, Eli third baseman, lifted a looper to centerfield. A brisk wind wafted the ball away from Schmitt just as he was about to catch it and blew it toward McFadden in left. Schmitt followed and, perhaps blinded by the sun, ran heavily into McFadden. The latter toppled over him and Schmitt's right leg seemed to be doubled beneath him.

Taken to Hospital

McFadden arose to return the ball to the infield but then as Schmitt groveled on the ground, went back to assist him. Soon players from both teams and spectators gathered around the injured and the game was delayed 15 minutes while he was removed to Georgetown Hospital.

His injury was the second bit of ill luck that befell Schmitt yesterday, for it was as much his fault, as McFadden's, that Yale spoiled Wixted's no-hitter in the sixth. Moe Jubitz, Yale's starting pitcher, started the first half of the inning by looping a short fly to left center. Schmitt and McFadden both ran at the crack of the bat, but then stopped, each apparently believing the other would make the catch, and the ball fell for a single.

The first hit that had been made off his hopping fast ball seemed to upset the lanky Wixted for he walked Jubitz to second and placed him in a position to score Yale's initial tally. It came after one was out when Will McClellan punched a clean single to center., and McFadden bobbled the drive and allowed Jubizt to cross the plate from third.

Bases Are Loaded

Wixted then fanned Eddie Collins, jr., hit Pinch Hitter Doonan on the wrist, to load the bases, and walked in the tying run by passing Mendoza, a second pinch hitter. Yale then went ahead, 4-3, on Jerry Besse's sharp single to center.

Georgetown, with the irrepressible Powers repeating his impressive performance of Saturday, when in relief he held Vermont scoreless for three innings, came back, however, to put over a run in the seventh on Schmitt's single and Jimmy Durkin's screaming triple to the edge of the left field embankment. And then sewed up the decision in the eighth when the Yale infield committed two damagng errors.

Reddish Takes Decision Over Jim Howell

Jake Friedman's Semi-Windup Victory Over Bowden Unpopular

Willie Reddish, Philadelphia heavyweight who is gunning for a late-summer bout with Tony Galento, won a unanimous decision over roly-poly Jimmy Howell last night in the feature ten-round bout at Turner's Arena.

But the victory did nothing to add to Reddish's prestige, for Howell, a 3-2 underdog in wagering, stood up under his best punches and laughed at him. Howell, in losing, gave the fans a good run for their money, and they gave him a big hand.

A generous slice of the gate receipts were turned over to the Belleville (Va.) Industrial School and home for widows and orphans. During intermission a group of choristers from the school entertained with songs.

Howell Won Two Rounds

Howell, constructed along the same bulging building lines as Galento, won only two rounds on The Post's score sheet, the second and fifth, but held his own in the fourth and ninth. He bloodied Reddish's nose in the fifth, and caused him considerable annoyance by a series of short right uppercuts to the head.

Reddish, continually boring in with punishing right hooks to the kidney and midsection that landed with resounding thumps, staggered Howell with a sharp left hook to the jaw in the eighth, but couldn't put him down. Reddish walked out of the corner at the beginning of the round and cracked Jim with a sizzling right to the head, and Howell merely stepped back and grinned at him.

Reddish looked a trifle foolish at times when Howell, a plump 224½ pounds, went close and stuck him with a left jab, and danced out of range before Reddish could retaliate. Willie kept plugging all the way, vainly trying for at least a knockdown, but Howell was too strong and determined for that.

Jake Friedman (183½), of Baltimore, scored an unpopular six-round decision over Jim Bowden (180) in the semiwindup.

Accused of taking a runout powder on Vic Finazzo last week, Frankie Wills (145) answered his critics with a one-round knockout victory over Vinc Solters (151), of Baltimore, in a scheduled six-rounder.

The District welter landed the finishing punch, a crisp right to the jaw, 2 minutes and 50 seconds after the start of the round. He bullied Solters throughout the earlier fighting and set him up for the decisive punch with a series of hard and accurate shots to the midsection.

Sid Silas (141¼), took the curtain-raiser from Johnny Buchanan (147½), a four-rounder that found the eventual winner leading and doing all of the damage from the start.

Johnny Kaplovitch (162¼), a lanky youngster who may grow up to be a heavyweight, scored over Buddy Thomas (158½) in a six-rounder.

Bowden Fined $20 For Tardy Appearance

Jim Bowden transplanted Texas heavyweight who dropped a six-round decision to Jake Friedman last night at the Arena was fined $20.00 by the District Boxing Commission for failing to appear on time for a scheduled bout. Bowden's tardy arrival almost resulted in a cancellation of the bout.

Cadets Defeat Terps, 4-3, on Rally in Fifth

Errors Pave Way for Three Runs, Brilliant Fielding Halts Foe

Lexington, Va., April 10 (AP).—Virginia Military Institute's baseball team staged a 3-run rally in the fifth inning today, to overcome Maryland's lead, and went on to defeat the Terps, 4 to 3. It was the Cadets' fourth straight win and Maryland's second defeat in six starts.

Andy Trzeciak opened the fifth for V. M. I. by reaching first on an error and scored when Crisafulli, Terp catcher, threw Woody Gray's bunt into right field. Paulshu doubled Gray home, but was caught off base. Kovar walked and was doubled home by Littrell.

The Cadets were able to nick three Terp hurlers for only five hits. Tight fielding, including two double plays and sensational left-field work by Kovar, repeatedly cut off Maryland scores.

Bone Chip Is Removed From LaMaster's Arm

St. Louis, April 10 (AP).—Dr. Robert Hyland today removed a small piece of chipped bone from the left elbow of Wayne LaMaster, Brooklyn Dodger Pitcher. He will be out of action about a month or six weeks.

Manager Leo Durocher sent the southpaw to Dr. Hyland last week after he complained his arm was hampering him in spring training.

G. W. Netmen Defeat Boston College, 8-1

New England Tennis Team Takes Single Match; Johnson Stars

George Washington University's tennis team opened its season yesterday in auspicious fashion by defeating Boston College, 8-1. The Colonial netmen captured five of the six singles matches and swept all three doubles engagements.

Davie Johnsen, G. W.'s number one player who holds the national junior indoor doubles title with Joe Fishback of New York, started the Colonials off on the right foot by defeating Capt. Dacey, of Boston College, 6-3,6-0.

Johnsen was stroking the ball well and once he hit his stride, Dacey was no match for the local youngster. Davie paired with Bus Fleming to defeat Dacey and Bismarck in the doubles, 6-3, 6-3.

Sulivan won Boston's only match, defeating Elwood Davis in three stiff sets, 6-4, 7-9, 7-5.

The match was played on the Columbia Country Club courts. G. W.'s next match is with Michigan on Thursday.

Galan Must Rest, Knee Is Sound

Chicago, April 10 (AP).—Dr. John F. Davis, Chicago Cubs' physician, said today an X-ray examination of Outfielder Augie Galan's ailing knee revealed nothing more serious than the need of rest and treatment for several days.

He sent Galan to Masonic Hospital, also temporary quarters for another Cub regular—Shortstop Dick Bartell, who is receiving treatment for a lame ankle.

Wasdell Slugs as Nats Defeat Bees in Rally

Three-Run Spree in Seventh Turns Trick; Boston Contributes Erratic Play to Washington Cause

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

Savannah, Ga., April 10.—Combining their talents on this hot afternoon in the deep South, the veteran Jimmy DeShong and the rookie Walter Masterson did a classic, three-hit job on the stingless Boston Bees. They pitched the Nats to a 4-2 victory.

Except for the Bees' fourth inning, it was a no-hit performance by the pair of pitchers Bucky Harris sent to the mound. In that inning, against DeShong, the Bees made all of their three hits. During the rest of the afternoon they were knee-deep in futility against DeShong and Masterson.

DeShong did the bulk of the pitching. He buzzed his fast ball past the Bees for six innings and then turned the job over to young Masterson. That downy-cheeked young man, only a few months removed from the Philadelphia sandlots, displayed once again why he is Bucky Harris' prize rookie.

Masterson walked the first man to face him—Al Simons—and Simmons was the only Bee to reach base through the seventh, eighth and ninth innings. Masterson's supporting cast didn't have a hard chance. He struck out two batters, winding up his stint with a flourish by fanning the last hitter to face him.

Wasdell Paces Attack

It was a rather nice afternoon, too, for Jimmy Wasdell, who was being regarded as the problem child of the Nats. Wasdell's problem heretofore has been his failure to hit, but today he could be referred to as the big gun of the Nats' eight-hit attack. He figured in 3 of the Nats' 4 runs by blasting out a long double to right field in the fifth, and a potent single with the bases full in the seventh when the Nats came up with 3 runs to win the ball game.

The Nats didn't lack from encouragement from the Bees in wiping out Boston's 2-to-0 lead. The Bees tossed in such things as a wild pitch, two passed balls and four errors that were exceedingly helpful to the Washington Club which didn't reciprocate, playing errorless ball.

In the fourth inning the Bees' first two hits of the game led to their only 2 runs. Hill ended the famine against DeShong by beating out an infield blow and Jimmy Hassett singled to center. They scored, respectively, on Al Simmons' fly to right and Tony Cucinello's single.

3 20-Game Winners Worth 50-1

Jack Doyle Explains Why He Believes Odds Are That Long

By the United Press.

New York, April 10.—A popular pastime these days is trying to pick three major league pitchers who'll win 20 games each. There are juicy odds for those who can do it—one buck will get you 50.

Jack Doyle, the venerable Broadway pricemaker, says the actual odds on any three pitchers winning 20 games each would be 37 to 1, but is willing to lay a price of 50-1 for the reasons he explains herewith.

"There are four potential starters on each club," he said, "and usually each club has one ace. Some have none and some have two, so it about evens up, making 16 pitchers in the majors who have a chance to win 20 games. Figuring percentages, the odds should be 37 to 1 against anybody picking three men out of this group who'll make the grade. But like a tailor who allows a little leeway when he makes a suit, I allow for the cranks and hunch players who will pick fellows like Mungo, Grove, Dizzy Dean and other long shots."

During the past five years the strong arm boys who can win 20 games have been growing fewer, dwindling from eight in 1934 to four last year. During this five-year stretch 34 pitchers have won 20 or more games, an average of 6 4-5 such pitchers per season. Usually when any one team can turn up two of them it means the pennant, as it did for the Tigers in 1934 with Rowe and Bridges, the Cubs in 1935 with Lee and Warneke, and the Yankees in 1937 with Ruffing and Gomez.

With the decline of Hubbell, Grove, Dizzy Dean, Rowe, Bridges, Warneke and Ferrell, the job of picking even one cinch 20-game winner is a tough one. On form, Red Ruffing of the Yanks appears to be the best bet, having hit the 20-game brackets the past three years with 20 each in 1936 and 1937 and 21 last year. But even Ruffing at 35 may be a gamble.

RUFFING

LEE

Less Than 7 Hurlers Achieve Distinction Yearly in Majors

Besides Ruffing, the others who were in the charmed circle last year were Bill Lee, Cubs, who won 22; Paul Derringer, Reds, who won 21, and Buck Newsom, Browns, who miraculously won 20 for a seventh-place club. Lee was in the 20-game class once before back in 1935, and so was Derringer the same year. It was a new experience for Newsom, who had a $1,000 bonus riding on every pitch he made to beat the White Sox for his twentieth.

In looking for 20-game winners this season I have picked ten possibilities from each league after talking to managers, players and scribes. Somewhere in this list you'll find three men who'll do the trick but it's not as easy as it sounds:

National—Lee and Bryant, Cubs; Derringer, Vander Meer and Walters, Reds; Gumbert and Melton, Giants; Bauers and Blanton, Pirates; Warneke, Cardinals.

American—Ruffing, Gomez and Pearson, Yankees; Bagby and Wilson, Red Sox; Feller and Harder, Indians; Bridges, Tigers; Krakauskas, Senators; Newsom, Browns.

Mrs. Pray's 44 Paces Ladies Day Golf at Manor

Net Honors Go to Simons, With 47-9-38

70 Golfers Take Part In Club-Guest Play; Mrs. Torlinski Wins Outsider Gross Prize

By Merrill W. Whittlesey.

Mrs. L. G. Pray, second only to Marion Brown as Manor's top-ranking woman golfer, opened the ladies' day tournament season at the Norbeck club yesterday by playing the outside nine in 44 strokes for low gross honors over a field of 70.

Barbara Simons, promising blonde girl golfer of the host club, copped net honors among the members with a nine-hole total of 47 minus a 9 handicap for a 38. Mrs. Max Taylor, with 49—10, 39, and Mrs. H. J. Hooper tied for second low net, 48—9, 39.

Mrs. H. L. Lacey required only 14 putts for top prize in that division while Mrs. H. J. Simons had lowest strokes on the selected holes, 11 and 14.

The guest gross honors went to Mrs. M. J. Torlinski, Army-Navy, with 50, while Mrs. Houston Harper, Mrs. W. B. Vogel and Mrs. Dunbar won net prizes, and Mrs. F. J. Kennedy low putts.

Mrs. W. G. McCreery's 51, 15—36, won low net among the members on the inside nine, while Mrs. R. E. Jones and Mrs. J. P. McMahon had 38s. Betty Jean Walker had low putts, 17, and Mrs. W. T. Farrell won the selective hole prize.

Guest winners on the inside nine were Mrs. C. Callahan, low gross; Mrs. E. A. Swingle, low net, and Mrs. P. H. Salovon, low putts.

Columbia Tourney Hopes Lifted by Young Yount

Columbia Country Club will present a new tournament threat to the pre-July card here in 17-year-old Barton K. Yount, who worked his handicap down to three during the past two years in Honolulu.

Yount has been playing over the Columbia course for the past ten days, and will be here until July when he expects to enter the United States Military Academy at West Point.

The free-swinging, long-hitting youngster was under par figures with a 69 on Sunday and had 75 yesterday while playing with Set Collins. Collins commented that "he'll cause a lot of local golfers plenty of trouble, even if he only stays until July."

Yount sent in his entry for the National Open yesterday, and will compete in the local sectional trials at Congressional. He has had previous tournament experience in the Honolulu Amateur and Open, and has been a frequent companion of Lieut. Ken Rogers, Hawaii, who has had several impressive performances in national tournaments.

Women's Team Matches Start Tomorrow

Indian Spring's role as top-heavy favorite in the Women's District Golf Association first team matches starting tomorrow at Beaver Dam was altered yesterday when Mrs. Myron Davy, a member of Congressional and Indian Spring, decided to play with the former.

Mrs. Davy has worked her game up to one of the finest in this sector and will be a valuable addition to the Congressional line-up. She will probably play in the first twosome, as she was slated for that post at Indian Spring.

The matches that open with teams of eight for the first time will still find Indian Spring in a favored role, however, although Army and Navy, Chevy Chase, Manor and Congressional may turn out to be threats.

Players are requested to bring caddies to Beaver Dam. The second and third team matches will inaugurate the season's play at Washington Golf and Country Club.

Columbia Clubhouse Plans Are Delayed

Plans for additions and alterations to the Columbia Country Club clubhouse, totaling $75,000, were referred to the board of governors at a meeting of the members last night.

After a heated discussion over plans to assess the members $5 a month for 18 months to carry the costs of the improvements, the motion to carry out the plans were tabled 109 to 107, and a counter-motion to refer it to the board of governors was carried by a unanimous vote.

The board has a scheduled meeting next Monday night and the plans will be discussed, but action may be delayed for some time.

The alterations included additional locker space, a new porch completely around the club, new offices and a cocktail room.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 10.—Dr. Hory Hogg, Lewisburg veteran, played into a stiff west wind today, to take the lead in the qualifying round of the Mason and Dixon Men's Amateur tourney.

Hogg, one of the six golfers who fared forth despite the breeze, marked up an 81.

John Chenoweth, of Charleston, with an 85, came in after Hogg, and was paced by S. W. Kinyon, of Owatonna, Minn., with 88, and H. H. Blackburn, of Lewisburg, with 91.

The entry fee, including the cost of games, will be $5 per couple. Three games are to be rolled either in the afternoon or night. Shorter Quail Season in Va. Is Considered

Other Proposals to Conserve Game Is To Be Discussed

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., April 10.—The State Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries announced today it had discussed plans to substantially reduce the open season on quail and certain other upland game.

Two plans for shortening the open season were considered by the commission at a meeting here Friday and Saturday. The commission suggested that the season on quail, grouse, turkeys and rabbits should begin on November 20 and run through December 31. Another suggestion was made to open the season November 20 and let it run through January 10. The last season opened November 15 and ended January 20.

These proposals will be discussed at a meeting to be held in Richmond May 1.

The commission listed other proposals to be acted upon at the May meeting as:

To reduce the squirrel and rabbit bag limit from ten to six a day and from 150 to 75 a season.

To reduce the bag limit on quail to ten a day. The daily limit now is 12. No change in the limit of 150 for the season was suggested.

To reduce the bag limit on grouse to three a day and 15 for the season. The present limits are four a day and 16 a season in most counties.

To fix November 9, 10 and 11 as the three days for hunting elk in Virginia this year.

Nats

headway against the Bees' Rookie Johnny Pezullo partially because the Bees were turning in three double plays, but in the fifth they came up with a run with Pezullo's help. Gelbert singled to center with one out and Wasdell moved him to third with a well-tagged two-bagger to right. Pezullo moved the run home with a wild pitch and a double play saved him further damage.

Danny MacFayden surrendered the winning runs in the seventh with the untimely help of his supporting cast. After walking Sammy West and pitching a single to Buddy Myer, MacFayden saw the bases filled because the Bees failed to get anybody in a rundown after Travis grounded to Fletcher at first base. Wasdell moved the tying run home with a single to left, but Myer, who also tried to score on the blow, was cut down by Simmons' throw to the plate. A wild throw by Shortstop Eddie Miller and a pair of passes by Rookie Pitcher Doll figured in the Nats' last two runs.

Notes of the Nats—The Bees and Nats moved out of Savannah tonight for Charlotte, where they meet again tomorrow in the fourth game of the series which now stands, 2-1, in favor of Washington. . . . Cecil Travis has played the last three innings of the Nats' two games and his presence in the opening-day line-up is now assured . . . All of the Nats' outfielders went hitless against the Bees' pitching today . . . Against the curve balls of wily Danny Macfayden, Bobby Estalella didn't even get a loud foul . . . Jimmy Bloodworth fielded a hot grounder to second base with his chin in the eighth inning, but picked the ball up and made a play at first.

The Brighter Side

By Damon Runyon

We see where two of our favorite actresses, Miss Katharine Hepburn and Miss Tallulah Bankhead, are in plays that are distinct hits and we consider this good news, for these ladies have had a lot of bad breaks in previous appearances on Broadway.

RUNYON

Their bad breaks consisted of plays that the dramatic critics said were no account and when that kind of verdict is returned by the dramatic critics there is nothing much that actresses can do about it, but go back to their tatting for awhile and await another chance.

There is no appeal from the verdict of the critics, as a rule, and we understand it would be considered most unladylike if the actresses went out and knocked the ears off their playwrights for giving them no account plays, although some right, sound legal authorities state that a jury might consider this justifiable mayhem, at that.

We have not got around to viewing the plays in which Miss Hepburn and Miss Bankhead appear, but we know Miss Hepburn's must be a prodigious success, because we note a renewal of the run of items in the public prints that the lady is going to be married, or is married, or is not married, or is not going to be married, as the case may be. We have noticed that this news about Miss Hepburn is usually most prevalent when she is being successful.

Generally the fellow she is going to be married to, or is married to, or is not married to, or is not going to be married to, is Mr. Hughes, the 'round-the-world aviator, and this we think illustrates the rank injustice in the world. Mr. Hughes has been rumored about to marry almost every desirable young lady you can think of, including Miss Brenda Frazier, and here they want to give him Miss Hepburn, too. No wonder there is public discontent.

Five Guys Swear Off

However, at the moment of going to press, there is really nothing definite to report on Miss Hepburn's matrimonial status, or lack of it. Perhaps it is better that she remain an open question in that respect because now that Mr. Gable and Miss Lombard are out of the way we will need something to speculate about.

Anyway, the real point at issue is that Miss Hepburn is a dramatic success, or is in a dramatic success, which amounts to the same thing, and it is high time, too. Fine actresses like Miss Hepburn and Miss Bankhead should never have to waste their talents on nonsuccesses. We have too few fine actresses on the American stage.

Miss Bankhead used to be almost as much of a matrimonial question mark as Miss Hepburn, but she furnished the answer not so long ago by getting quietly married. The marriage in no manner marred her acting ability, and, in fact, may have improved it, but it did hurt her box-office draw to the extent of five guys. They have sworn never to see her perform again out of sheer vexation.

Miss Bankhead, who is of the Alabama Bankheads, famed in political office-holding, and Miss Hepburn both have amazing facility in the portrayal of stage ladies of exceptionally ornery dispositions. In fact, such is their facility in this respect that the uninitiated sometimes think they must have had a lot of practice. However, it is probably just their consummate art.

Miss Bankhead is, perhaps, the better actress of the two, but she has had greater stage experience. She is one actress we could always stand, even in a bad play. Miss Hepburn has been wasting a lot of time in pictures that she should have been devoting to the stage. That is where she belongs. That is where all good actresses belong. For their soul's sake.

Miss Hepburn is a high-headed young lady, who was not always properly appreciated by the cash customers of the cinema. It is difficult to tell why. She turned in several great performances for the pictures. Some of the exhibitors finally pronounced her "box office poison," though it is our conjecture that they will live to eat those words.

Both Girls Are Game

We find a certain analogy between a great actress and a great prize fighter. The one thing they both must have is gameness. They must be willing to get up off a knockdown and battle on. We have always admired the way Miss Bankhead took her dramatic lickings and kept on trying and it looks as if Miss Hepburn has the same quality of spunk. She got shoved around in her last Broadway appearance prior to this, besides what those movie exhibitors said about her.

A dramatic critic once told us that there are, in his opinion, only six great actresses on the American stage. He named Miss Bankhead as one of them. He said he guessed Miss Katharine Cornell and Miss Helen Hays were the other five. Miss Hepburn was out in Hollywood at the time, wearing slacks, and giving movie directors headaches, but we gathered from the critic's review of her current Broadway performance that if she keeps punching, she may increase his list to seven.

Mike Jacobs Hopes Roper Is Not Too Good With Louis

Los Angeles, April 10 (AP).—Michael Jacobs, who has transferred his fistic promotions to the West Coast for the Joe Louis-Jack Roper encounter April 17, arrived today to see that all is in order.

He said he would be satisfied if the gate reached $125,000, and when one of his lieutenants assured him the take would be $155,000, Mike beamed.

"There's nothing doing in New York in April, so I might make a permanent arrangement for a big fight in Los Angeles every April," Jacobs said.

He expressed belief Roper would turn in a good fight. But, Mike added, "I hope he isn't too good, because I have Louis booked up for the balance of the year. But if Roper can win, more power to him."

U. Va. Rallies To Win, 2 to 1, From Spiders

Jacobs' Fumble Becomes Break in Airtight Battle

Richmond, Va., April 10.—Virginia University accepted its final chance to beat Richmond's Spiders here today, pushing across a belated run in the ninth inning to break a deadlock and win a 2-1 victory.

The break of the closely contested battle came when two Cavalier hits in the ninth put men on bases and Pete Jacobs, Spider second sacker, came up with an error that allowed one runner to romp home.

Until that time, for the first six innings at least, Richmond seemed destined to add a shutout to the no-hitter pitched and won last week by Ned Butcher, its star hurler. Richmond took a one-run lead in the opening stanza and from then until the seventh, Pitcher Vaughan held the Virginians to exactly no runs.

It was Shortstop Gosney, of the Cavaliers, who smashed out a two-base hit in the first half of the seventh that sent a teammate across the plate and knotted the score. The best pitching performance, despite the loss, belonged to Vaughan, of Richmond, who struck out seven and gave up only two bases on balls. Pinder, the winning pitcher, struck out only four, allowed four walks and hit one batter.

Four hits were garnered off each hurler in the duel, Butcher, last week's star hurler who played in the outfield, contributing one for Richmond. Gosney turned in a single and double in two trips to the plate for Virginia.

15,000 to See Bruins BattleLeafsDespite Blizzard inToronto

Toronto, April 10 (AP).—Riding into town on a blizzard of mid-winter proportions, the Boston Bruins and Toronto Maple Leafs tonight looked forward to playing before a capacity house of about 15,000 when they renew their struggle for the National Hockey League's Stanley Cup at Maple Leaf Gardens tomorrow night.

The blustering snowstorm kept all but a handful of fans from greeting the players at the railway station, but the chilly reception didn't prevent Manager Conny Smythe, of Toronto, from issuing a confident statement. Said Smythe:

"We're just coming and the Bruins are going, we're each got one win now but our boys were only getting into stride when we left Boston."

U. S. Yacht Wins In First Race

Hamilton, Bermuda, April 10 (AP).—The visiting United States team of international one-design yachts gained its first victory in three races against Bermuda sailors today, by defeating the Bermuda team, 21¼ points to 15.

The race was decided at the start when Bill Cox, piloting Joseph L. Merrill's Feather, luffed two Bermuda rivals across the starting line before the starting gun was fired. Feather jockeyed Jim Pearman's Zephyr and Vincent Frith's Teaser into the false start, but went over the line herself.

All three had to return and start afresh, but the United States yacht was in better position to do it and remained on top all the way, to lead the fleet home. The four Bermuda yachts all lost ground in the scramble at the start and only Bayard Dill's Coquette was a contender for top honors.

MELLENDECK

George Washington's starting football backfield next fall will resemble an array of fire plugs, what with Billy Richardson, Tom Grady and Ken Batson, a trio of so high, chunky guys lugging the ball . . . Joe Mellendeck, Georgetown's great halfback who was named on the All-American team of the Daily Worker and to every All-District team last season, may never play football again . . . he still is limping on the leg he injured in the Maryland game, the Hoyas climax to an undefeated season . . . George Washington next season promises to have one of the outstanding pair of football ends in the country in Bob Nowasakey, a senior, and Sam Babich, a junior . . . Nowasakey, an unanimous All-District selection in 1938, was called by Redskin Coach Ray Flaherty one of the best college ends he ever saw . . . and because Redskin Owner George Marshall also has watched the 195-pound wingman with avid eyes, it would be no surprise if he bobs up in a Washington uniform in 1940-41 . . . One reason Marshall is attracted to Colonial players is Jay Turner, former G street fullback, who, perhaps, was the Redskins' rookie find last year . . . Jay, who was signed, some said, as a publicity stunt to arouse local interest in the Redskins' training at Ballston, turned out to be an excellent blocker and defensive player and saw considerable action.

Two sons of former big league stars are standouts on the Yale University nine which met Georgetown yesterday . . . Eddie Collins, jr., covers second base for the Elis and "Smokey Joe" Wood, jr., is a pitcher-outfielder . . . S'funny Wood, sr., who went to Columbia, should send his son to one of the Lions' keenest rivals.

According to John (Lemuel Q.) Busick, who spreads publicity for G. W., the Colonials unearthed in their recently concluded spring practice the most colorful player since "Zuzu" Stewart, the chubby, baldish guard . . . The new "glamour boy" is John Kokoski, a chattering junior, who plans to change his name to Cooke—which would be a break for the linotypers.—JACK MUNHALL.

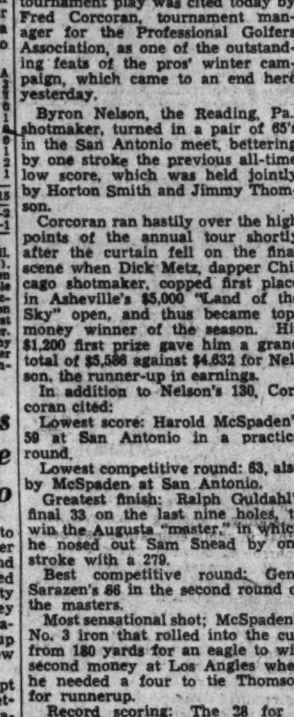
Nelson's 130 Tops Pro Tour



BYRON NELSON

Leo Walper Made 2 Greatest Shots With Consecutive Eagles in Texas

By the Associated Press.

Asheville, N. C., April 10.—A record-shattering 130 for 36 holes of tournament play was cited today by Fred Corcoran, tournament manager for the Professional Golfers Association, as one of the outstanding feats of the pros' winter campaign, which came to an end here yesterday.

Byron Nelson, the Reading, Pa., shotmaker, turned in a pair of 65's in the San Antonio meet, bettering by one stroke the previous all-time low score, which was held jointly by Horton Smith and Jimmy Thomson.

Corcoran ran hastily over the high points of the annual tour shortly after the curtain fell on the final scene when Dick Metz, dapper Chicago shotmaker, copped first place in Asheville's $5,000 "Land of the Sky" open, and thus became top-money winner of the season. His $1,200 first prize gave him a grand total of $5,586 against $4,632 for Nelson, the runner-up in earnings.

In addition to Nelson's 130, Corcoran cited:

Lowest competitive round: 63, also by McSpaden at San Antonio.

Best competitive round: Gene Sarazen's 66 in the second round of the masters.

Most sensational shot; McSpaden's No. 3 iron that rolled into the cup from 180 yards for an eagle to win second money at Los Angles when he needed a four to tie Thomson for runnerup.

Record scoring: The 28 for 9 holes in the Miami's four-ball by Guldahl and Snead. Guldahl's 30 was also a record.

Best driving: Thomson's average for the entire tour was about 290 yards. His longest reported drive was 410 yards.

Two greatest shots: Consecutive eagles by Leo Walper on No. 16 and No. 17 at San Antonio, without being on the fairways. He holed a 125-yarder on No. 16 and chipped in from the rough on the next hole.

Record three rounds: Nelson had 68, 65, 65 in succession in the Phoenix open.

Best prospects: Ben Hogan, Clayton Heafner, E. J. Harrison.

Down In Front

With Richards Vidmer

New York, April 10.—A week from tomorrow! A week from today in a couple of cities, for Washington and Cincinnati open their baseball seasons ahead of everybody else. But a week from Tuesday all 16 major league teams will swing into action, weather permitting, and it seems so short a time ago that the Yankees were putting an end to the World's Series, blasting the Cubs for their fourth straight victory.

VIDMER

Yet there have been a lot of changes since that bright October afternoon. Managers have been shifted, new managers hired, old managers released. Players have been traded, bought and sold. Rookies have come up fresh from the minors with the chance of making good. Veterans have undergone operations on their aging arms with high hopes of coming back.

And, though the Yankees appear from this observation post to have a cinch in the American League, and the Reds seem to be the best in the National, a lot of other things will happen before another World's Series rolls around.

Among the matters which will provide a lot of early interest is the crop of newcomers and how they will stand up when the chips are down and the going counts in the final reckoning. Some of those who have shown major league promise and who will be followed with more than casual interest are Ted Williams, Jim Tabor and Woodrow Rich, of the Boston Red Sox.

If any team is going to stop the Yankees from winning their fourth consecutive pennant, it looks as though the Bostonese will have to do it. And these three rookies, averaging less than 22 years of age, are the ones who will have to furnish the improvement to overcome the powerful Yankee machine.

Big Shoes to Fill

Williams will replace Ben Chapman, traded to Cleveland, in the outfield and Chapman hit .340 last year. Tabor will replace Pinky Higgins at third base and Higgins hit .303. Rich is a pitcher, and pitching is what the Red Sox needed most last season.

There are, of course, other youngsters who will be followed closely, but I mentioned these three particularly because they seem to carry the greatest responsibility. Cleveland is counting on Jim Webb at short; Detroit has hopes of getting regular service from Frank Croucher in the infield and Barney McCloskey in the outfield; the Yankees expect either Charlie Keller or Joe Gallagher to take over an outfield job, and the Senators, Browns, White Sox and Athletics have regiments of rookies who my or may not make the grade.

Lou Gehrig seems to be the problem child of the Yankees, and there are many who see the end of the trail in his weak work during the exhibition games. Boston still doesn't know whether Lefty Grove, whose arm went dead last year, will be able to pitch again, and there is some question of whether Jimmy Foxx, most valuable man in the league last season, can keep up the pace he set all through the 1938 campaign.

Rookie Halts Champs, but Gives 12 Hits

Pearson Goes Route And Is Pounded; Losers Unable to Deliver in Pinches

Atlanta, April 10 (AP).—Red Evans, the veteran "rookie" moundsman the Brooklyn Dodgers snatched from the New York Giants last winter, checked the New York Yankees today for the full nine innings while the Dodgers belted out a 13-to-5 victory. The Yanks made five errors which figured in the scoring and their starting pitcher, Monte Pearson, gave seven walks.

Evans, the first Brooklyn pitcher to go the route, was touched for 12 hits, including a homer by Tommy Henrich. Pearson yielded eight runs in five innings before giving way to Jack Haley. Fred Sington led the Dodger attack with a double and a triple to drive in five runs.

A split second after this shot was made yesterday in Dallas, Tex., Harlan Clift, of the St. Louis Browns, leaned on that white pellet being burned in there by the Chicago Cubs' Bill Lee and sent it sailing 400-odd feet over the fence. Despite the wallop, however, and the run that followed, Lee went the distance to win his first game of the season, 10-2

on Fishing

The Metropolitan Miami Fishing Tournament, in which it is estimated that more than 125,000 anglers have participated already, with the closing date still a week off, has one last opportunity for the many hundreds of Washingtonians who took part in the fun to have a say in the final selection of the winner of the Outdoor Life plaque.

ACKERMAN

In fact they are frankly asked by the committee to lend their aid in nominating the angler for the outstanding angling achievement, that in their estimation has been narrowed down to seven catches. This, however, does not prevent choosing some other outstanding accomplishment if you so prefer.

Following is the description of the seven catches that are outstanding. Your selection may be made in a letter to this column, or to Tommy Aitken, executive director, Miami. Easier still, if you prefer one of the seven, just mark first, second and third choice and send the clipping with your name signed across it.

White marlin, 141 pounds, caught by Ralph J. Mills fishing out of Miami. It was taken in 2 hours and 25 minutes on 21-thread line. Rod and reel were so ancient as to make this catch really remarkable.

The blue marlin, weighing 508 pounds, caught by Mrs. Paul Piggott, fishing out of Cat Cay in the Bahamas, on [illegible] thread line. Her fish scaled within 2 pounds of the woman' world record on this species.

The blue marlin, weighing 156 pounds, caught by Robert C. Mankowski out of Cat Cay. He was using regulation Catalina light tackle with 9-thread line. His fish, the first blue marlin of any weight ever taken on 9-thread.

The 102½-pound tarpon caught by Miss Frankie Laidlaw, fishing at night from a small skiff on Shell Key Bank, with only 50 yards of light line and the lightest bait-casting outfit with a level wind reel.

The 93-pound wahoo caught by Glenn J. Chell, out of Miami Beach on 24-thread line. His catch was a new North American record for the species.

A sailfish, weighing 104½ pounds, caught by Miss Ruth Edmunds, fishing from Miami Beach on 24-thread line. Miss Edmunds had never been on the Gulf Stream before, in fact, had never caught any fish worth mentioning, yet her "sail" established a new world's record for women on Atlantic sailfish.

There you are, with a swell chance to stick a finger in the international pie, for that is what it amounts to, with anglers entered from every State in the Union, Canada and several foreign countries. No two of these lucky anglers who seem to have a leg on the award come from the same place. There is one Miamian, with the other six hailing from that many States. Nothing beyond their name has been noted to avoid any chance of partiality.

This award is by no stretch of the imagination, small potatoes, for, after all, his will be the outstanding achievement for 1939 in the piscatorial world—tops in the greatest fishing tournament ever to be held anywhere on the face of the globe. He will be king of fishing realm for at least a year.

With the closing of this contest on April 16, and a story by Tommy Aitken, its director, there will not be much further note of Florida fishing, except results of the Cat Cay Tuna Matches, in which several Washingtonians will be competing.

Red Sox Beat Reds, 4-3, on Foxx's Homer

Clout Saves Game in Tenth; Both Teams Get Fine Pitching

Rocky Mount, N. C., April 10 (AP).—Jimmy Foxx's home run in the tenth inning gave the Boston Red Sox a 4-to-3 victory over Cincinnati today in a game in which all Red scoring and all but two Sox tallies were by the Circuit route.

Johnny Vander Meer, Lee Grissom and Jim Weaver for the Reds matched Jim Bagby and Jakey Wade in allowing but six hits. Goodman, Riggs and Craft homered for the senior loopers, while Williams clouted a round-tripper to start Boston scoring in the second.

The Sox added another in the fourth when Vander Meer, making his first start since the team left Florida, walked three, then fed an easy ball to Vosmik for a scratch single.

Dallas, Tex., April 10 (AP).—Bill Lee went the route for the Chicago Cubs today, holding the St. Louis Browns to eight scattered blows as the National League champions won their second straight game, 10 to 2.

The Browns' pair came in the fourth on home runs by Harland Clift and Johnnie Berardino.

Four Cub runs also were scored on homers by Billy Herman and Phil Cavarretta. Herman doubled in the fifth to drive in 1 other score.

Pirates Defeat Chisox, 7 to 3

Shreveport, La., April 10 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates thumped the Chicago Americans, 7 to 3, today, running their winning streak up to eight straight.

The White Sox grabbed a two-run lead in the second on Kuhel's triple, Bejma's single and Lyon's double, with Russell Bauers pitching. They filled the bases with none out in the seventh, when Rip Sewell went to the mond, but could score only one run because of a double play.

Gus Suhr's double with mates on base and Young's single in the seventh, an infield out and a fielder's choice provided the winning margin. The Pirates added three more later.

Saving Grace, Paying $11.20, Takes Bowie Feature Race

Evening Light Beats Out Ebony Blue

Johnny Oros Rides 'Rattlesnake Pete's' One-Horse Stable to Victory; Wins $700

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Bowie, Md., April 10.—Tears were in "Rattlesnake Pete's" eyes this afternoon. They were tears of joy. He didn't hide them. Yes, "Rattlesnake Pete" stood on the track and waited for Apprentice Jockey Johnny Oros to bring his meal ticket to the winner's circle after the fourth race. And what name could be more appropriate for a one-horse stable than Saving Grace, a daughter of Economic.

In fact, it was "Rattlesnake Pete's" economic situation that led to his acquiring Saving Grace. And it was economics that led "Rattlesnake Pete" to spend last winter very close to Saving Grace. The filly came out of retirement this spring, round as a butterball. "Rattlesnake Pete" was his usual skinny self which may or may not have any significance.

But today "Rattlesnake Pete" saddled a winner. Saving Grace, dolled up in green and white blinkers, the colors of the bankroll he needed. Yes, $700 came "Rattlesnake Pete's" way when Oros brought her home ahead of Evening Light and Ebony Blue in the Anne Arundel purse. He didn't even look at the $11.20 mutuel displayed opposite Saving Grace's number on the electric board. But he probably was thinking of that big check awaiting him in the secretary's office.

Tears were in "Rattlesnake Pete's" eyes one afternoon at Laurel last October. They were tears of sorrow. He didn't hide them. Little Swede, then his meal ticket, tripped over the brush in a steeplechase and broke his neck.

Track regulars will remember the horse and perhaps "Rattlesnake Pete," whose name appears on the program as F. McKay. Little Swede and his owner gave the turf scribes a laugh the week before. Not satisfied with being trainer and owner, "Rattlesnake Pete" decided to be his own jockey. He was a veteran jumping rider. On the afternoon of this race, he went down to the paddock and could not find Little Swede. The fellows at the barn had forgotten to bring the horse to the paddock. Officials ordered Little Swede scratched and the laugh was on.

Among those who knew of his plight was Henry Horkheimer, owner of the Three Cousins Farm and Pompoon. The Maryland sportsman made "Rattlesnake Pete" a present of the filly Saving Grace.

$89.20 Double

Those who invested in the "7 and 3" combination of Lee S. in the first race, cashed in $89.20 daily double race, cashed on $89.20 daily double mutuel. Johnny Oros, the popular apprentice, scored an easy victory with Lee S. The $9.30 shot drew out to a long lead and was never threatened, winning by six lengths. Bold Fay and Cackle Time followed the leader to the wire.

Cyrus P., ridden by Apprentice Al Snider, came up in the stretch to win by a neck in a photo finish which saw Kaptime, a field horse, heading Henryels Pick out of second money. Cyrus P., owned by E. K. Murray, paid an individual mutuel of $19.70. Barraca, which set most of the pace, stopped as if she were shot and was next to last at the line.

Abrasion, a juvenile from the J. W. Y. Martin barn and trained at Pimlico, scored easily in the third race and turned in the fastest time for the 2-year-old half-mile course made this meeting. The Canter gelding was clocked in 0:47 4-5. Rough Biscuit was second and Baltee, the favorite, was third. Ridden by Jockey Charlie Stevenson, Abrasion was sent to the top at once, had a tussle with Rough Biscuit and then went on to win by four lengths.

ANN MOWLEE went evenly, but was not a threat.

KAPTIME raced BARRACA into defeat to take the lead between calls and closed gamely, but was unable to resist the winner. HENRYELS PICK was a keen forward factor from the start and fought it out with good energy. CLEANING TIME, away slowly, saved ground while bettering his position, came through on the rail to take the lead in midstretch and faltered suddenly. CHARLES F. had no excuses.

Daily Double, Lee S and Cyrus P, paid $89.20

ABRASION, sent to the front at once, shook off challenges of ROUGH BISCUIT to draw out and was running easily at the end. ROUGH BISCUIT was in tight quarters shortly after the break, went to the leader with good energy, but weakened in the stretch. BALTEE had no excuses. BREAKING WAVES was taken up while in close quarters just after the start.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; allowances. The Anne Arundel. For 3-year-old fillies. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:06½. Off at 4:08½. Winner, F. SAVING GRACE, sent up on the inside to take command going to the turn, was rated along while setting the pace and weakened under intermittent punishment to just last. FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:31½. Off at 4:36. Winner, O. S. Pennings' ch. g. UGIN, off alertly, was rated close to the pace of FRENCH BREAD, responded when shaken up in midstretch and wore down the pacemaker to win while opening a gap under pressure. FRENCH BREAD went to the front at once, was rated to the stretch and weakened under punishment in the closing sixteenth. DIZZY DAME could not keep up to the stretch and came to the outside to close full of run. LADY INFINITE raced wide and could not threaten.

WESTBROOKE, well placed from the beginning, saved ground entering the stretch and came willingly at the end, but was no match for the winner. FLYING FEET raced SPRINGS HERE into defeat, but weakened gradually in the stretch run. SEA GULL moved up on the outside along the backstretch, but tired gradually after reaching the leaders.

Dear Al:

Pompoon served notice to the Stake division that he will have to be dealt with very soon. He worked a mile in 1:45 at Pimlico yesterday morning and appears fit as a fiddle. Goldman and Idle Elf, the horses that figured in last Saturday's dead heat, are from the same barn. No. 1 up on the hill in back of the half pole. They are four stalls apart. Here is an interesting note of Goldman. He is one of twins, having a full sister named Ducmiss. This is the only twin combination now in training. They are 5 years old and are by Breadman out of Goldbound.

High Hedge which was shown so much speed here was sold for $50 at the same sale that John Manfuso bought Aneroid. Walmiss, well known also ran hereabouts, went for $400 at the same auction. Here's one for the books. I was over to the stable talking to Alan Clark yesterday. A horse up the row kept sticking his head out of the stall and looking at me. A stable boy came along so I asked him the name of the horse. "Why, that's Big Ned," he replied. And that boy doesn't know me from Adam. I turned around to get a good look at the horse and darned if he didn't stick his tongue out at me. Jockey Earl Porter was an arrival from Florida. Jockey Leon Garrett of Charles Town and half-mile fame, writes that he will be at Pimlico to take a few mounts before starting heavy work at the West Virginia track. Donald Hay, mutuel manager at Charles Town, was a visitor here yesterday. He said he visited the three-quarter track last Sunday. I asked him if the track had gotten fast since last December. He reports that upward of 200 horses are working every day.

BILL.

First Race—Pine Tag was third with better-grade platers last week, after being knocked back at the barrier. Dropping down today into a cheap field, he looks like the winner. Abbol's Lark raced behind Pine Tag, received liberal betting support, but had no excuses. May improve. Howellville makes his first start this year, after showing fair form last fall.

Second Race—Carnage formerly had a bit of class and showed a return to her old form when she finished strongly, to lose a close decision to Teddy Patic last Monday. She is due to improve and is nicely placed. Couleedam failed to untrack himself his only start here, but gets good figure on Santa Anita form. Lady Orchid can better a disappointing effort last outing.

Third Race—Donnagina finished a bang-up second to Marion W, despite interference in the early running. In a small field here she should take the top and never look back. Onisse figures to offer most of the competition on the merits of his second to Nicky on Friday. Pompey's Rose is bred for speed, but makes her first start.

Fourth race. Phara Belle was a trifle short in her race last Tuesday when she was third to Short Cake, but was favored over the winner and receives a better figure from her races on the West Coast. Short Cake won her last at first asking this year, is a classy miss, and will be the one to beat. Romaunt would be a strong factor on an off track.

Fifth race—Zostera took the top on high class platers last outing but failed to last in the stretch run. A winner here last fall, he has the speed to whip this bunch and will move up in muddy going. High Hedge took the top and quit Saturday as is his custom, but should last for second position. Burning Pace raced well at Santa Anita a year ago.

Sixth race—Darby Du was slow to find his stride in his only start here but closed with good courage in the stretch. A winner twice at the Florida tracks during the winter, he appears much the best of this mediocre field. Pascua showed promise in Florida and indicated top form by winning her last. Helen's Lad was a winner at New Orleans and may be dangerous.

Seventh race—Fight Back didn't run his race last Monday and is reported to be on edge for his best today. He is nicely placed and weighted today and should win it. Miss Ponne was fourth to Anglo Saxon this week, has speed, and will be the one to beat. Franco Saxon has a consistent form chart for the meeting and may upset the dope.

Best bet—Darby Du.

Two-Year-Old Champ Does Eight Furlongs In 1:43 2-5 Breezing

By the United Press.

New York, April 10.—William Ziegler's El Chico, 4-1 favorite for the sixty-fifth Kentucky Derby, proved his ability to run over an off track in an excellent workout at Belmont Park today.

The 1938 2-year-old champion splashed through 8 furlongs of loose mud in 1:43 2-5, breezing all the way. He appeared eager to run at the finish.

"I guess that answers the question as to whether 'The Kid' requires a pasteboard track in order to step," said Trainer Matt Brady as he ordered El Chico cooled out after the trial. "You'll see him in competition next Saturday at Jamaica."

To Race at Jamaica

Brady plans to start El Chico in a 6 furlong overnight race on the week-end when the 1939 season opens at Jamaica. Our Mat, stablemate of El Chico and also eligible to the Derby next month, also worked a mile over today's cuppy track. He went along handily throughout the test, timed in 1:45. No definite plans have been made for the colt's 3-year-old campaign, but it is expected he will accompany the stable star to Kentucky for the Derby.

At Aqueduct, where a rain-drenched course also prevailed, Johnstown, Belair Stud's main reliance in the $50,000 added Churchill Downs Special, was saddled for a light gallop. The bay chestnut Jamestown colt merely romped over the course under light restraint. Trainer James Fitzsimmons said Johnstown would make his seasonal bow in the $7,500 added Paumonok Handicap, feature event of the opening program Saturday.

Starlies Clockers

T. M. Dorsett, erroneously reported as being on the ailing list, also is quartered at the Queens County Jockey Club track. The chestnut son of Cohort, sire of Ciencia, the filly which won the Santa Anita Derby last Fberuary, startled clockers by his dazzling speed in a mile workout yesterday. He circled the distance in the fast time of 1:43.

Trainer J. B. Theall emphatically denied published reports that his charge was in a critical condition as a result of an insect bite. "The horse was laid up for four days at New Orleans before coming here last Thursday," Theall said. "His illness was nothing more than a slight case of laryngitis from which he has completely recovered."

Bees Send Dickshot To Jersey City Club

Boston, April 10 (AP).—President Bob Quinn of the Boston Bees, today announced the outright sale of Outfielder Johnny Dickshot to the Jersey City International League Club.

Dickshot came to the Bees last fall from Pittsburgh, where he broke in from Little Rock in 1936. The Pirates used him as a utility outfielder for three seasons. His weak right-handed hitting eliminated him when Casey Stengel attempted to groom him for Boston's centerfield vacancy.

New Prices in Effect, Record Crowd Expected for May Derby

Col. Matt Winn Makes it Possible for Butcher, Baker and Candlestick Maker to Attend

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 10.—Witnessing the Kentucky Derby, America's premier horse race, no longer is a privilege limited to folks with folding money.

The race this year will be open to the modern butcher, baker and candlestick maker, rich and poor alike, with prospects of an attendance of 100,000, greatest in the 65-year history of the event. It will be run on Saturday afternoon, May 6.

Col. Matt Winn, guiding genius of the race for the past 37 years, has opened the gates to the working man, with tickets at 50 cents each. Heretofore general admission, good for the run of the grounds without a seat, has been $2.

Col. Winn, with enthusiasm belying his 77 years, left for Louisville today eager to carry out his plan for admitting the crowd to a terraced point of vantage in the infield at Churchill Downs. He figures he can accommodate 20,000 in that space, thus increasing the capacity to record proportions.

A Derby for All

"After all," Col. Winn said, "the Kentucky Derby belongs to the American people and I'm going to make it possible so thousands of people can see the race for 50 cents, and in comfort, too. For years the Derby has been built up to such degree that the popular belief exists that only the aristocrats can enjoy it. From now on the working man can get in, even though he can afford to pay only 65 cents, and that will also include his lunch."

The grand old man of the American turf, who saw the first running of the race as a lad of 14, back in 1875, and from the infield too, reflected for a moment, and then went on to explain his idea.

"For two years we have been unable to begin to accommodate those who wanted box seats, selling at $15 each, and even grand stand seats, which brought $11," he said.

"The common guy never had a chance. Now the fellow with only a dollar or two to spend can see it, possibly better than a chap who pays $5 to get in.

Dime Sandwiches

"In the infield our 50-cent customers will have a better vantage point than some of the folks in the clubhouse. They can see the horses coming down the backstretch, where many a Derby has been decided, and they can see them rounding into the homestretch."

Col. Winn said he had instructed his catering department to provide milk at 5 cents a glass, coffee for a nickle and sandwiches for a dime. Even $1 mutuel tickets will be sold to infield spectators, if they choose to wager.

"After all," Col. Winn continued, "much of the fun in witnessing the Derby is betting on it. Four people can chip in a quarter apiece and have their fun. The common fellow, living 100 or more miles away from Louisville, can chip in with his pals to meet the cost of gasoline and drive down to see the race and his whole expense will be no more than $2 for transportation, lunch, his ticket, and even a piece of a $1 wager."

U. S. Building & Loan League Plans Meeting At Charleston, S. C.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Delegates from the District of Columbia Building and Loan League and those of 11 States will plan to make the community the center of recovery efforts at the Southeastern Group Conference of the United States Building and Loan League, bringing 300 executives of savings, building and loan associations to Charleston, S. C., April 28-29.

Emphasis on community institutions for home financing will be a feature of the meeting which is to be addressed by Frank Hancock, member of the Federal Home Loan Board of this city, and other nationally known men. Effect of Government housing on real estate values and effect of legislation now pending here on potential services of savings, building and loan associations will be discussed by officers of the United States League.

There will also be technical discussions of the savings and loan business, especially of methods of making their services better known and increasing the demand for home loans. Both are looked upon as instruments for recovery in the communities, according to George E. Comer, Bristol, Va., who is president of the conference.

Principal Addresses

Speakers will include Clarence T. Rice, Kansas City, Kans., president of the United States Building and Loan League; George W. West, Atlanta, Ga., first vice president; Morton Bodfish, Chicago, executive vice president; Ralph H. Richards, president of the Federal Home Loan Bank of Pittsburgh, and Horace Russell, Chicago, general counsel for the United States League.

A session on "New Business" will be participated in by savings and loan association executives from various Southeastern States, including W. H. Walker, Miami; Henry Irr, Baltimore; W. T. Gravely, Danville; E. L. Pfohl, Winston-Salem, and W. B. Ferguson, Louisville. The Southeastern Conference comprises Alabama, Delaware, District of Columbia, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Maryland, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia and West Virginia.

Home Loan Bank Loans

Federally chartered savings and loan associations increased the amount of private savings invested in them by nearly one-half during 1937 and 1938, a study prepared for the Federal Home Loan Bank Board shows. A comparison of the savings, or "private share investments," in 1,130 identical Federal savings and loan associations on December 31, 1936, and the same date in 1938, showed they grew from $464,729,000 to $665,132,500, or by 43.1 per cent, during this two-year period.

Steel Operations Drop to 52.1%

New York, April 10 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week will decline 2.6 points to 52.1 per cent of capacity, compared with 54.7 per cent last week. The American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today. A month ago operations were at the rate of 55.7 per cent of capacity and a year ago they were 32.7 per cent.

The decline—which was the largest week-to-week drop thus far in the year—carried operating schedules to the lowest level since the week of January 23, when the rate was 51.2 per cent of capacity.

Consolidated Oil Net $7,737,712 in Year

New York, April 10 (AP).—Consolidated Oil Corporation today reported net income for 1938 of $7,737,712 after charges, equal to 56 cents a share on presently outstanding common stock, excluding shares held in the treasury.

This compares with 1937 net income of $20,809,295, or $1.51 a common share, on the basis of present capitalization.

Steel Industry Loss 11 Million For Last Year

Cleveland, April 10 (AP).—Twenty-two leading steel companies representing 92.5 per cent of the Nation's total ingot capacity, incurred a $10,936,841 deficit after all charges but before dividends in 1938, the magazine Steel's annual financial survey showed today. In 1937 the same producers had $211,479,861 net profit.

Total income before deducting bond interest was $22,061,470, compared with $241,938,183 in 1937. The year's income, insufficient to meet funded debt interest, indicated a 0.57 per cent return on total capitalization, the lowest since 1934.

For 18 of the reporting firms, operations averaged 39.3 per cent of ingot capacity in 1938 against 71.5 per cent in 1937. Net sales of 19 companies totaled $1,015,773,603, a 39.2 per cent decrease from the 1937 figure of $1,670,958,840. The leading producer did not report net sales, however, the publication said.

Of the 17 largest producers, only two showed earnings on common stock, National Steel Corporation with $3.05 and Inland Steel Co. with $3.11.

Auto Factory Sales 58% Above Year Ago

New York, April 10 (AP).—The Automobile Manufacturers Association estimated today that total factory sales by American companies in the first three months of this year were 1,055,787 cars and trucks, a gain of 58 per cent over the same period of 1938.

The association said apparently about 87 per cent of the sales went into the domestic market, while the balance went to foreign lands.

Grain Prices Sag Despite War Clouds

With Foreign Marts Closed Wheat Closes Near Day's Lows

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 10.—With grain traders throughout the world apparently less alarmed over the European political situation, prices slumped fractionally here and in other markets today.

Persistent selling caused quotations to dip as much as ⅞ cent at one time in Chicago and all markets closed with prices near the day's lows. The stronger tone of securities was interpreted as indicating less concern in financial circles. With foreign markets closed, European interests were assumed to be watching North American trading but there was no renewal of the active buying which lifted wheat prices more than a cent Saturday in one of the most active sessions in months.

More than 17,000,000 bushels of wheat for future delivery were purchased here Saturday. This compared with a daily average of about 8,000,000 bushels the five previous sessions.

Wheat finished ¼-¾ lower than Saturday, May, 68¾@68⅞; July, 68@68⅛. Corn, ⅛-¼ down; May, 47¾@47⅞; July, 49⅜. Oats, ⅛-¼ lower. Rye unchanged to ⅛ off. Lard, 8-13 lower.

Wheat Estimate Higher on April 1

The Agriculture Department said yesterday that April 1 conditions indicated a winter wheat production of 549,219,000 bushels. The forecast in December had been about 485,000,000 bushels.

Last year the winter wheat crop was 688,637,000 bushels. It averaged 560,160,000 bushels in the ten years, 1928-1937. Conditions on April 1, the department said, indicated an abandonment of about 16.0 per cent of the 46,173,000 acres of winter wheat seeded last fall.

The Market

By C. Norman Stabler
a Special Correspondent.

Prices Make Brisk Rally Despite Europe; Short Covering and New Buying Factors; Bond Closings Highly Irregular

New York, April 10.—The European outlook was decidedly more ominous today and comment by American political leaders was scarcely calculated to calm war fears, but security prices made fairly substantial recoveries. It was assumed that technical considerations determined the trend. Short covering and some new buying attracted by drastic markdown of quotations last week were a help in giving transactions in both bonds and shares a more orderly aspect.

The eastern shut-down in most overseas markets delayed any repercussions which might arise from the Italian-Albanian incident, news of General Franco's deal with the Rome-Berlin-Tokio axis, and mobilization of British seapower on reported threats to Gibraltar. On domestic fronts, Wall Street was frankly worried over references to war by President Roosevelt, on the eve of his return to Washington, and by Secretary Hull, in his report to the Chief Executive on the latter's arrival.

Business Reports Poor

Business and industrial reports contained no incentive for the long side. Steel operations declined for the third successive week, the latest drop being more pronounced than the previous ones. Copper producers capitulated in their long fight to maintain prices for the red metal at reasonable levels, meeting the half-cent cut announced last week by custom smelters. The offering of two large security issues, aggregating about $40,000,000, was deferred because of the generally unsettled state of markets. Stiffening of gasoline prices and estimates of record domestic automotive travel this summer were partly offset by Washington advices that the monopoly committee has slated petroleum companies for its next group scrutiny.

Recovery in shares ran as high as four points in the high-priced and less active issues and from 1 to better than 2 in more popular descriptions. Loft headed the list with a turnover of 35,600 shares at an advance of 1¾ points, an enhancement of nearly 25 per cent in market value. The reason was appearance of unofficial reports that a decision will be handed down in the Pepsi-Cola case, now before the Delaware Supreme Court.

Motors Regain Ground

General Motors and Chrysler, among prominent shares on the downside last week, regained 1½ and 2¼ points, respectively. Bethlehem Steel added more than 3 and Steel common closed at 46⅝ for a net rise of 1½. Coppers moved ahead with the rest, ignoring the lowering of metal prices and estimates of a very nominal volume of business in domestic copper markets. Anaconda was active at an advance of ⅞.

Rails were unsteady in spots, New York Central being an exception with a ⅝-point rise. Unofficial estimates were that carloadings for the latest week will show a more than usual decline because of the shutdown of soft coal mines. Movements of other commodities, it is believed, are holding up rather better than expected.

Thin markets developed in some of the high priced shares. Dow Chemical jumped 7 points on a few sales, and Spalding preferred broke 6 on a single transaction. Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit preferred spurted 10 and traction bonds were impressively higher on announcement of consolidation progress. Aviation stocks were less in the limelight than is usual in active markets, but most of them were well ahead at the close.

Foreign exchange quotations were of a nominal nature, due to the closing of European markets. An additional $7,300,000 of gold was reported en route from London. Cotton ended with minor changes after dull dealings. There was no follow through to buying based on war prospects in wheat markets, and quotations were lower at Chicago.

Foreign Bonds Weak

The bond market was highly irregular today, with sharp advances interspersed with abrupt declines in a wide varity of issues. United States Government long-term issues opened the day lower and then developed a measure of steadiness and firmness. The volume of trading in the entire market did not greatly exceed Saturday's total.

The index of 30 bonds, patterning its movement after that of stocks, showed a gain of .11 of a point, with only the 10 industrial obligations closing lower. A small volume of dealings sufficed to bring about wide swings in a number of issues.

Of all the departments, however, the weakest was the foreign bond list. Belgian, Greek, Bulgarian and Yugoslavian issues sagged sharply. Gains were interlarded with losses in the German issues, with the losses predominating. The Dawes 7s closed unchanged on the day at 20. The next coupon on this issue is payable on Saturday, but no indication has yet been given as to whether the payment will be made.

Among the corporate issues, B. M. T. 4½s of 1966 advanced 11½ points on the disclosure of further details of the unification plan. I. R. T. issues rose from 2¾ to 7 points. Several of the second-grade rail bonds were firm, including especially B. & O. and Southern Pacific issues, but others in this group were quite soft.

Cotton Prices In Narrow Rut; May 7.99 Cents

Bombay a Seller Hedging on Brazil; Textile Prices Firm

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 10.—With price signals from foreign markets missing, cotton futures stuck to a narrow price groove today. Closing prices were 1 point up to 2 down. The market got off to a lower start as nearby deliveries fell back under scattered offerings and Bombay liquidation.

When the stock market showed rallying forces at work, however, numerous price-fixing orders from the trade supported the list. Later hedge selling—believed to be against the new Brazilian crop—was well taken care of by trade interests and local traders.

Secretary Wallace's statement to a Senate sub-committee that "if economy is our main purpose, we should follow the path of export subsidies combined in sensible fashion with acreage control and the ever-normal granary," was not a vital factor in the markets' swings.

Worth street textile markets reported limited turnover at generally firm prices. Exports today, 3,244 bales; season so far, 3,009,627. Port receipts, 3,410; port stocks, 2,248,093.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil futures played over a wide price range today to show net gains of 6 to 8 points at the finish. The market mainly followed erratic fluctuations in lard quotations. Sales totalled 178 lots: May, closed 6.63 bid; July, 6.80; September, 6.91; October, 6.93.

Scattered sales of crude oil were reported early at 5½ cents in the Southeast and Valley. Texas nominally quoted 5¼@5⅜.

D.C. Real Estate Licensing Act Changes Asked

Commissioners Propose Broadening, Clarifying Law, Reducing Fees

Amendments to the District real estate licensing act designed to broaden its scope, clarify it, and reduce licensing fees for brokers were proposed to Congress yesterday by the Commissioners.

Commissioner Hazen, in the letter of transmittal, explained that the present act is deficient in many respects and not clear in others. Reduction of broker license fees from $50 to $30, he said, is recommended, as a surplus is being created and the Commissioners believe that the act should not be used as a revenue measure.

Major amendatory provisions recommended are aimed at bringing business-chance brokers and salesmen under the law which now regulates real estate brokers and salesmen.

Broadening Provisions

Broadening of the law is recommended to include persons who sell lots for burial purposes, anyone who builds and sells houses on his own land, and persons who sell lots in subdivisions comprising ten lots or more.

A change in the compensation of members of the Real Estate Commission is proposed. Instead of being paid $10 a day for working a seven-hour day, with an annual limitation of $2,000, the bill proposes to pay the commissioners $10 for "personally attending a meeting" and to reduce the yearly limit to $1,500.

The present requirement of proof of competency during a probationary period in the licensing of salesmen is removed in the revision.

Free Lots Banned

One amendment prohibits the offer of free lots or prizes in the sale of realty property and makes it unlawful to pay an unlicensed broker or salesman.

While retaining the prohibition against the transfer of licenses, the revised act would authorize the issuance of a new license to a person whose status has changed. Licenses would be denied any firm in which there is a member who, though actively engaged in the brokerage business, is unlicensed.

Non-residents affected by the act no longer would be required to maintain a residence in the District under another amendment. All bonds for licensees must be issued surety companies.

Church Basis Of Democracy, Says Mgr. Ryan

Catholic U. to Fight For Peace, Moral Values, He Tells Conference

Only Christianity, with its emphasis on the individual, can provide a basis for Democracy, the Right Rev Mgr. John A. Ryan, D. D., last night declared in an address before the thirteenth annual Conference of the Catholic Association for International Peace, at the Mayflower Hotel.

A distrust of democracy, peace, moral values, and idealism has become widespread in the modern world, he continued, a gospel of defeatism in which Catholic University will have no part.

Speaking at the conference dinner, Mgr. Ryan replied to an address of Miss Anna Dill Gamble, of York, Pa., congratulating Catholic University on its Golden Jubilee.

'Passivity Was Danger'

Miss Gamble had called the University responsible for breaking down the secularist viewpoint of the Nineteenth century and teaching the importance of the Catholic point of view as an influence on public opinion.

Catholic "passivity" was a "positive danger to public welfare" before the university placed the Catholic Church "in her rightful place in society," she declared.

Mgr. Ryan replied that "Catholic Action is a wide and organized sense owes nearly everything to the Catholic University of America."

Lima Pact Applauded

Charles G. Fenwick, of Bryn Mawr College, told the gathering that the Declaration of Lima, by which the 21 American republics recognized their "common concern" if anyone was threatened, and their common adherence to republican principles and the will for peace, as "something to stand up and cheer about in a world where there is little to cheer."

The Rev. John LaFarge, S. J., associate editor of the magazine America, declared that justice must be total, including all men without prejudice to race or creed, and every phase of man's life.

Pope "Natural Leader"

At the speakers' table were Marie Carroll, of the World Peace Foundation; Dr. Elizabeth Lynskey, Hunter College, N. Y.; Dr. James Eagan, New Rochelle College, New Rochelle, N. Y., and Mrs. Eagan, the Rev. Charles Miltner, Dr. John L. McMahon, and Dr. John Travey Ellis, of Catholic University.

An international conference to adjust world differences was urged by the Rev. Charles Miltner, University of Notre Dame, and Mgr. Ryan, who pointed out that "we have no solid reason for thinking we can keep ourselves safe by doing nothing."

U. S. Should Call Parley

The Rev. Cyprian Emmanuel, O. F. M., of the Franciscan Monastery in Cleveland, declared that the United States has a moral obligation to summon such a conference.

Other speakers were Marie Carroll, Mother Mary Lawrence, Rosemont College, Pa.; the Rev. Gregory Feige, Little Flower Monastery, Newton, N. J., and John L. McMahon, Catholic University.

John Schuler, of Fordham, presided at the afternoon session, and Charles G. Fenwick, president of the association, in the morning.

AAA Official to Speak

The conference will continue today with a discussion of "Organization and Tasks of a Conference," led by Harold J. Tobin, of Dartmouth College. James Cavin, of the Agriculture Adjustment Administration, and Marie Carroll will speak. This afternoon Dr. Eagan and the Rev. Joseph P. Donovan, Kenrick Seminary, Webster Groves, Mo., will discuss "International Bill of Rights and World Organization," with the Rev. Geoffrey O'Connell, Clarksdale, Miss., in the chair.

Growth of Housing Authorities to 230 Traced in Lecture

Growth of housing authorities, from 30 a year ago to 230 at present, was explained last night by Bertram Gross, of the United States Housing authority, in the Monday lecture series at the Twelfth Street Y. M. C. A., under auspices of that institution and the National Negro Congress.

Projects under 150 local housing authorities, he said, already have had the original $800,000,000 given the national authority earmarked for their use. The local authorities, operated by five members, are different from the Alley Dwelling here, in that this organization also operates a slum clearance project, while the national authority operates solely in the interest of low-cost housing.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Today is ladies' day. The three questions on bidding discussed here have been submitted by the fair sex.

The first problem is posed by Mrs. J. S., and amusingly enough, the players bid just opposite to the value of their cards, the timid player being the one who should have been aggressive, and vice-versa. It would seem that, even though the positions were reversed, the pair should have reached the right contract, but it didn't. Here are the cards:

North
♠ 6 3 2
♡ A Q 5
♣ K Q J 10 7
South
♠ J 10 5 4
♡ K 6 3
◇ A 9 4
♣ A 8 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT.	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 NT.	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

South's one no-trump bid was skimpy, and he certainly held no rebid to two no-trump when his partner merely bid two clubs. North on the other hand, has the natural response of two or three no-trump to his partner's opening one no-trump call and emphatically should not "sign off" with a bid of three clubs.

Most good players like to open a weak balanced hand, such as South's, with a three-card bid in a minor suit to keep the bidding low and make partner's reply easy. The bidding, according to them, should go like this:

South	West	North
1 ♣	Pass	3 ♣
3 NT.	Pass	Pass

Missed a Slam

Missed a Slam

Mrs. I. S. A. wishes the bidding of this hand analyzed which stopped short of a slam. Here are the cards:

North
♠ A J
♡ A 10 6 2
◇ A K Q 9 8 7 3
South
♠ K 2
♡ K 10 4
♣ K Q J 10 9 8

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	4 ♣	Pass
4 NT.	Pass	Pass	Pass

Neither player distinguished himself in the bidding of this hand. A slam certainly should have been reached either at diamonds or no-trump. The three-diamond bid was an underbid, inasmuch as a three bid is used primarily to impede the opponents' bidding—a sort of mild shut-out.

The hand might be bid in a number of ways to reach six, and in our opinion South erred grievously in passing North's four no-trump bid. He should have answered five clubs, at least. Five no-trump would have been more optimistic and would encourage North to go to six.

Incidentally, the North hand, as presented by Mrs. I. S. A., has fourteen cards.

Two Close Decisions

Mrs. L. B. asks for a decision on two border-line hands. The first:

♠ J 7 6 5
♡ K 9 7 6
◇ 10
♣ K 10 5 2

"What is the response to an opening bid of one spade?" Mrs. L. B. inquires.

It seems to us that two spades would be the best bid on this hand. It is too weak for three spades, and a minor-suit response in clubs will distort the bidding unnecessarily.

The second hand:

♠ K Q 10 7 5 3
♡ K Q 9 7
◇ None
♣ J 6 4

"Would you make an opening bid not vulnerable?" she questions.

We might make an opening bid on this hand and we might not. It would depend upon the circumstances—whether the game was rubber bridge or duplicate, the status of the score and our feeling toward the adversaries and partner. However, we see no harm in opening the bidding on this hand, and we know a great many good players who would not hesitate to do so.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

Senator Ellender intends renewing his investigations into favoritism in the Federal service late this week. In the meanwhile, he will continue sifting through the thousands of cases brought to his attention to find the ones that seem to be pertinent enough for public airing. When the hearings are resumed the clothesline, for the civil service soiled linen, will be strung as usual in Room 357, Senate Office Building. The public is invited.

The National Park Service urges visitors to the parks to spare the wild flowers. This request is included in an announcement of the spring opening of picnic areas in the Fredericksburg and Spotsylvania National Military Park, near Washington. "The visitor must remember that he cannot pick wild flowers on National Park Service property. The National Parks are preserves for both wild life and wild flowers," says the announcement.

The Union Playhouse, sponsored by N. F. F. E. FEU No. 2, will be a belated Army Day program, to be held Thursday, April 20, in the Agriculture Department Auditorium. Two films to be shown are: "Service to Those Who Served," and "Flashes of Action." The former film will show work being done by the Veterans' Administration facilities—which is a plenty, considering the 70-hour weeks the employes put in. The Honor Guard, American Legion, will participate. The Sons of Legion Band will play.

R. M. Evans, AAA administrator, spoke on "The Farmer Needs a Living" at 5 p. m. yesterday in the Agriculture Auditorium, under auspices of Agriculture Local 2, U. F. W. A. . . . Meetings announced for this week by the N. F. F. E. are: Tuesday, 7 p. m., finance committee, 710 Fourteenth street northwest; 8 p. m., Bureau of Engraving Women's Local 105, Willard Hotel. Wednesday, 5 p. m., executive council, D. C. Federation, 710 Fourteenth street. Friday, 8 p. m., board of representatives, 710 Fourteenth street.

A "Transportation Quiz," in which members of the Federal Transportation Association will compete in their knowledge of terms from the freight profession's traffic glossary, will feature the association meeting at 8:45 tonight (Tuesday), in the Commerce Auditorium.

First prize is a free trip to the New York World's Fair. Dr. G. Lloyd Wilson, professor of transportation and public utilities at the University of Pennsylvania, will speak on "Transportation As a Profession."

Speaking of world's fairs, the FHA has just run up some sort of a record by negotiating a loan right on the grounds of San Francisco's Treasure Island. A visitor to the fair was so taken in by the sights and whatnot that he marched forthwith to the office of a local bank set up on the grounds and borrowed funds to build himself an Oakland home. The bank had been set up for other routine purposes, but the FHA facilities were available.

The anger of Representative Keefe (Republican), of Wisconsin, over alleged WPA slurs on the memory of one of George Washington's descendants, brings to mind Representative Sol Bloom (Democrat), of New York, and his campaign to preserve the fair name of the Father of His Country.

Years ago Bloom took his worries to President Coolidge, complaining against "debunking" authors, notably Rupert Huges, who were, he said, slandering Washington's reputation. Something should be done about it, Bloom insisted.

Coolidge, the story goes, gazed steadfastly out of the window, across the Ellipse.

"Well," he drawled, "the Monument's still there isn't it."

Bob Burns Says—

If you study the lives of successful men you'll find that in pret'near every case these men when faced with a difficult situation didn't side-step it, but took the bull by the horns and met it like a man. Everybody admires a man who takes a firm stand and shows that he has courage and grit.

I was a guest not long ago at the home of one of the most successful men out here. At breakfast one mornin' his wife came to the table in tears. She told her husband she'd just had a terrible argument with the cook.

A hard look came into the eyes of my friend and his fists clenched. He jumped to his feet and said, "Of all the impertinence! No one can talk to my wife like that and not answer to me for it. I'll discharge her!"

His wife says, "Oh, I'm so proud of you! Maggie's in the kitchen right now."

And my friend says, "Good! I'm going to the office—when you hear the telephone ring you tell Maggie I want'ta speak to her."

Scotland's Glamis Castle Ancestral Strathmore Home

PRINCESS ELIZABETH, 3 YEARS AGO

Sir John Lyon Was First Ancestor Of Present Line

By Lady Cynthia Asquith.

CHAPTER II.

Let us follow the happy story of this unself-seeking daughter of Scotland who has thus had greatness thrust upon her.

The youngest but one of ten children, Lady Elizabeth Angela Marguerite Bowes-Lyon, now Queen of England, was born August 4, 1900, at St. Paul's Waldenbury, the Hertfordshire home of her father, the fourteenth Earl of Strathmore and Kinghorne.

Family Traced to 1377

The first ancestor in the long line of Strathmores, of whom there is any record, is Sir John Lyon, of Fortevoit, who was Chamberlain of Scotland from 1377 to 1382, and married Jean, the daughter of Robert II of Scotland. Their grandson, created the first Lord of Glamis, was one of the hostages for the ransom of King James I, who were delivered up to the English in 1424, and kept in captivity for some years. He and both his sons became Lords of Council, and two of his grandsons fell at Flodden. The tenth Lord Glamis was created Earl of Kinghorne, and the twelfth took the title of Strathmore.

Many members of this long line were actively involved in the turbulent history of their country. None in a more painfully picturesque manner than the unfortunate Countess of Strathmore, who, having rightly or wrongly been accused of conspiracy against the person of King James V, was burned as a witch in Edinburgh!

The environment of Queen Elizabeth's childhood was certainly strikingly picturesque, for her father, who had succeeded to the Earldom when he was 4 years old, was in the habit of dividing the year between the three beautiful country houses of which he was the owner. Of these three the most celebrated is the Scottish home of the Strathmores, Glamis Castle in Forfarshire, a fortress which came to the family more than 555 years ago when Princess Jean married Sir John Lyon.

Oldest House in Britain

Glamis is one of the names Shakespeare has sent thrilling through the centuries, and, though its connection with any one so remote as Macbeth, "the Thane of Glamis," is only legendary, it probably is the oldest inhabited house in the British Isles.

A huge pile of weathered sandstone, it rises with its many battlements and turrets silhouetted against the sky, from the "Strathmore," or in English "the great valley," a fertile plain lying between the Grampians and the heathered Sidlaws. For the building as it now stands, the first Earl Patrick, 1578-1615, was largely responsible.

Originally there were nine walls around the castle, and on the lawn in front of it still stand two stanch towers, the sole survivors of the first line of defense.

A stronghold of superstition, Glamis Castle is the seat of more legends than any other home in Great Britain. The very air seems thick with tradition, and the peaceful present overcast by shadows from the savage past; shadows that are without even electric light to disturb them.

Malcolm Died in Castle

The main gateway of this medieval fortress is a triple-arched stone structure, battlemented and surmounted by carved lions, and inside there is still the heavily barred "yett" or iron gate.

The huge circular stone staircase with its 86 steps, up which five persons can walk abreast, is gauntly impressive. The oldest part of the building, it seems to belong to the dead rather than to the living. The immense thickness of its walls gives it a vaultlike coldness, and the solidity of its unworn stone steps has defied time and the tread of unnumbered generations of mortal footsteps.

Tradition asserts that it was up these stairs that the bleeding King Malcolm was carried to die in the room still called after him, while his assassins fled across the frozen fields to fall through the ice and be drowned in Forfar Loch.

And helter-skelter up and down these grim stairs, on which, besides King Malcolm, innumerable victims of fierce feuds perished, generations after generations of children have rushed in delirious games of hide-and-seek. None more swiftly than Queen Elizabeth and her brothers and sisters. What other children can ever have known quite such exciting scope for hide-and-seek? Besides real trap doors, there are mural chambers concealed in the thickness of the walls and secret staircases with access to the vast roof.

Childhood in Hertfordshire

A lovely formal Dutch garden is Lady Strathmore's chief contribution to the beauty of her home. Designed by herself, this new garden is entirely encircled by a yew hedge. At one end a terrace is raised about 4 feet above the rest, and here there are two little garden houses. In the center the four semicirular stone steps are faced by a fountain lined with minute blue tiles, which, however dull the day, always give the happy effect of reflecting blue skies.

Although it is the family seat most associated with the Bowes-Lyons, it was not Glamis, but St. Paul's Waldenbury, the house in which she was born, that was the chief setting of Queen Elizabeth's nursery days. Except for three months of the autumn that were always spent at Glamis, a fortnight at Stratelam Castle in Durham, and an occasional visit to London, most of her early childhood was passed in Hertfordshire.

She tells me that for the first few years after her father succeeded to the earldom, she and her inseparable companion, David, the youngest of the family, regarded "Glamis as a holiday place, Streatlam as a visit, and St. Paul's as home."

It would be difficult to find any dwelling more strongly contrasted to Glamis than St. Paul's Waldenbury, a beautiful Queen Anne house of rose-red brick with magnolia and honeysuckle rioting all over its friendly face.

Lithuanian Folk Dancers to Bring Gay Garb And Flying Feet to National Festival Here

Chicago Park District Aide to Lead Group In D. C. Performances

Gayly colored costumes and flying feet mark Lithuanian folk dances, which are as spirited as any to be seen in Europe. Immigrants to this country who have retained this traditional agility and lightheartedness will display their skill before Washington audiences at the National Folk Festival, April 27-29 at Constitution Hall.

The dancers will come from Chicago under the leadership of V. P. Beliajus, folk-dancing director for the Chicago park district. Beliajus, outstanding exponent of Lithuanian culture in this country, has received acclaim from dance critics as well as from his countrymen.

The Lithuanians will appear on the afternoon and evening programs April 29. At the matinee they will present "An Agricultural Scene in Lithuania," which was highly successful at last year's festival. Numbers will include "Suktinis," or Dance of Turns; "Lengyos," requiring extreme lightness of foot; "Augonele," or Poppy Dance, and "Wedding Dance." In the evening they will reproduce a Lithuanian May Day celebration.

Sponsor of the Lithuanian group is the Baltic-American Society of Washington, which will present Beliajus and his dancers in a pre-festival recital April 27 at the King-Smith Playhouse. August Nikula and L. J. Esunas are arranging the program, which will include Baltic and Oriental dances. Esunas also is sponsoring a similar program the next evening in Baltimore, at Lithuanian Hall.

Two of the Lithuanian dancers who will dance at the sixth annual National Folk Festival opening in Constitution Hall April 27

Tickets for the sixth annual National Folk Festival at Constitution Hall, April 27-29, are on sale at The Washington Post Building, 1337 E street northwest, daily and Sunday from 8 a. m. until midnight. Prices for the matinees range from 50 cents to $1; for the evening shows, from 50 cents to $2. A different program will be presented at each performance.
